1,000 jackets, capes & furs secured at 50% off.

As incredible as it may seem, it is nevertheless a fact—we have bought from the foremost maker of jackets, capes and fur things an immense lot of garments at exactly half marked prices. 'Tis almost needless to state the reason for this immense concession. You know that five weeks or more of what ought to be cold weather has passed without the least suggestion of it. Retailers haven't been to the market to reorder, for they haven't begun to dispose of their first shipment, and consequently makers are in a terrible plight—overstocked—over-produced—with thousands of dollars' worth of wraps on hand, which should be on the people's backs.

The offering of these thousand exclusive and high-class garments, together with the immense lot which were made up from ends of bolts which we told you of yesterday—so early in the season, and at half prices & less,

will break all records for wrap-selling in this city, for it is a fact that such a thing has never before been known.

The crowd here Monday should and will be enormous, but we have engaged extra salespeople, so that you may be assured of proper services.

No matter how much longer you put off buying your new wrap you will never be offered, at no time of the season, values so great as are in this sale; therefore it is much to your advantage to buy now, and get the benefit of the wear.

Just to think, a thousand garments and half and less to pay for them.

JACKETS. CAPES.

Ladies' handsome French jersey jackets in new shades of tan, blue, black, navy, etc.; seams finished with jersey straps; velvet lined collars; fancy pocket flaps; some lined throughout with taffeta silk; finished with pearl buttons and came duplicated elsewhere under $12.50, yet you get your choice of them for $6.98. Ladies' Persian lamb, astrakhan and novelty double collar of maroon fur-front lined; shawl front and new coat back—just such a coat for which you'll be asked $15 to $18 about town—your choice of them for $8. Imported English jersey capes in black and in new shades of tan, blue, royal and navy; some with fur trim; some with fur-trimmed with rows of narrow satin stripes; others with jersey trims; some are lined with beautiful colored satin, and some with taffeta silk; none are worth less than $18—and just to think, we offer your choice of them for $8.98. All lengths in a lot of silk seal plush capes (guaranteed the best $1.50 a yard), embroidered with hand and handsome trimmings with jet beads—some with Thibet fur; others with Thibet fur and Thibet fur; many beautifully braided and embroidered; absolutely waterproof; satin lined—such as you cannot buy elsewhere for less than $15—your choice of them for $7.98.

FUR CAPES. Child's Reefers.

A harvest for housewives.

Monday starts a sale in the Housefurnishings Department that marks a new era in selling. The values offered are made possible by cash buying, in large quantities direct from first hands. THE SOCIAL WORLD

Count von Goetzen Both Explorer and Author.

HAS CROSSED DARKEST AFRICA November's List of Happy Brides and Grooms.

OTHER NEWSY TOPICS

The first international marriage of the coming year will be that of Count von Goetzen, military attaché of the German embassy and Mrs. May Stanley Lay, and since the announcement of their engagement, a week ago in The Star, society has been busy discussing the beauty and amiability of the bride-elect, and hearing with great astonishment of the wonders done for geographical science by the gallant German explorer, which modestly prevented him from appearing here in the role which he has so proudly won—that of an intrepid and successful explorer. Count von Goetzen inherited great wealth and social position, two factors which would go far toward completing the ambition of the average individual, but they were only for him a means to an end. In 1883 he determined upon an expedition through central Africa, with the purpose of exploring the completely unknown country between Lake Albert Edward and Tanganyika lake. Earlier explorers had surmised the existence of an active volcano in this territory, and the people of which are so numerous and savage that Stanley wrote he did not dare to penetrate its interior.

With these two aims in view, Count von Goetzen, at his own expense, fitted out an expedition and started from the German East African coast with two white men, fellow scientists, 50 black soldiers, 500 black porters and two Indian elephants. After a march of four months and a half, during which sickness from smallpox, scarcity of water and attacks from hostile natives, were some of the hardships endured, the Kagera river, one of the source rivers of the Nile, was reached, and the frontier of the present German East African empire was reached, and two and a half months later the Atlantic ocean. European geographical circles had lost sight of the expedition in this long time, and when the telegram announcing its arrival at the mouth of the Congo was received, it created great sensation. Count von Goetzen was made a member of the German geographical society, and a handsomely illustrated volume of his travels.

Count von Goetzen's family will be represented at his marriage by his sister, a young lady who will be here to spend Christmas. The count has but recently returned from his tour in Canada, where he will spend the winter. The couple will spend the next few months in Europe, and will go at once to their residence in Berlin.
