STORY OF NEW WITNESSES

Trial of Dennis Canty for Murder of George Rye.

FREQUENT COLLOQUIES OF COUNSEL

Evidence Concerning Rye's Alleged Possession of a Knife.

PROGRESS OF THE CASE

The fifth day of the trial of Dennis J. Canty, charged with the murder of George W. Rye in March last, began at 10 o'clock this morning in Criminal Court No. 1, before Justice Cole. Canty, as usual, sat behind his counsel, with his former partner, W. H. Van Sunden, on his left. Near him also sat his devoted wife. He preserved the same calm and collected demeanor that has characterized his conduct since the unfortunate tragedy occurred, and followed closely every word of witnesses and counsel.

The exclusion of the general public was appreciated by those whose duties compelled their attendance at the trial, the outside warmth not being materially felt in the court room, which would have been otherwise almost unbearable had the usual crowd attended.

When court convened Judge Cole directed the recall of Witness Rhodes, and stated that he believed it would be proper to admit the first witness Canty ever since the shooting, as it would tend to show that the defendant did not contemplate flight. He directed Mr. Worthington to inquire what Canty said after somebody had said, "Don't let him get away."

Mr. Worthington thereupon asked Rhodes what Canty had replied to that remark. His answer was:

"Canty said: 'I'm not going to try to get away.'"

District Attorney Davis objected to witness stating what Canty said in addition to this. Judge Cole supported this, but allowed the statement to be made a part of the record.

Mr. Rhodes was then excused and the list of witnesses called. When the name of Leslie Russell was called, and he was given, Mr. Davis stated that the witness had not been present yesterday or today, and that he was not called for his testimony. Judge Cole directed that this be done.

First Witness of the Day.

The first witness called was William A. Freeman, a colored barber of 1907 M street northwest. His witness appeared with a toothpick in his mouth, and was sworn with it there. It was removed and replaced by a pencil.

Freeman is employed at Henry Wilson's barber shop, 708 14th street northwest, in the immediate rear of the Wyatt building. He first saw Canty about five minutes before 12 o'clock. He was by himself in front of the barber shop. A few moments afterward he was joined by Mr. Pierre Wagzaman. Mr. Wagzaman left Canty and got in a vehicle and drove south on 14th street. Canty walked down the pavement in the direction of F street.

Witness went into the shop and heard a shot. He ran out and saw Mr. Canty standing between the electric light pole and the multi-box crossing. He saw a gentleman in the middle of the street with a frock coat on and a heavy hat. One shot was fired before witness saw the parties. Then two shots were fired in quick succession. When witness first caught sight of Mr. Rye he was standing with his hands up, his right side toward Canty and facing him. He saw Canty, with his hands still up in the air, cried, "Murder! Murder!" Witness stated that Rye then moved backward and fell. Witness was reaching for him to place his arm under Rye's head and help him down easy on the pavement. Witness saw the first shot fired, and then three other men ran up. Witness said to the others:

"Come, let's take him to the drug store." The witness and the others then carried him to the drug store.

When Rye's body was lifted up witness heard something fall on the pavement and remarked that somebody had dropped. Did not see what it was, but heard somebody say "Let it alone." Witness held Rye's head in the drug store until he died.

Mr. Worthington examined Freeman, make any statement to Mr. Worthington when request to do so a few days after the shooting and the others then carried him to the drug store.

did not see the position of the parties previous to the second shot. The smoke from Canty's pistol obscured the witnesses' view of Canty. There was an appreciable interval between all the four shots. When witness passed Rye, after he had fallen, Rye's head was lying on his right arm, which was extended. No one was near Rye then, and he was lying on his back. A man, who was evidently a barber, he was colored, and had on a white coat. Witness was running after Canty. Thought Freeman, who stood up in the courtroom for identification, was the man. Witness went up and laid his hand on Canty's left arm. Canty was on the road bed. He made no effort to get away. He had walked probably fifteen feet from where he fired the shots when witness reached him, and had then stooped and turned toward the spot where Rye had fallen.

Mr. Worthington asked witness what Canty said at the time he reached him. Mr. Davis called him had been drawn out about what Canty said.

Mr. Wilson thereupon arose and stated that everything that Canty said at the time of the shooting and the subsequent proceedings was vital to the case, and should be admitted. A portion of the facts should not be considered as immaterial.

The discussion continued for several minutes, and was finally concluded by Judge Cole deciding that anything Canty said which might tend to show the reasons that led to his shooting Rye could be permitted.

Continuing, witness, in reply to Mr. Worthington, said that he was wearing a blouse had taken hold of Canty at the same time witness did. When Canty said something about not running away the man in the blouse started to get away, and witness recited the conversation.

Canty's Question to Bystanders.
This question of Canty's has been so far kept out of the proceedings, but it is common property in the court. Canty, on being taken by Mattingly and the man in the blouse and Witness Rhodes, asked:

"So you see that man draw a knife on me?"

"So far Mr. Davis' objections to the introduction of this query have been upheld, and it was again upheld by the court.

Witness was asked by Wm. A. Widney what he recalled, Freeman, the barber, was also recalled, and asked if he saw Mr. Widney at Rye's body. He was positive Widney was not there, and he was positive that he was the first man to reach Rye. Mr. Widney then testified that he, himself, was the first to reach Rye's body, and witness claims was found under Rye's body, and said they had never seen it before.

When the Lie Was Passed.
Walter C. White, a youth employed as a clerk in a store at the corner of 428 F street, who, at the time of the shooting, was employed by another broker, was next called. Witness was going by the corner of 14th and F streets when he saw Mr. Canty walking toward another man. Just as witness passed Canty and the other, whom he did not know, he saw a white man, he met Mr. Rye coming from 15th street. Witness kept on and then heard Mr. Canty say something to Mr. Rye, that he did not understand. He saw the man, he continued, "You owe me $200." Then Mr. Rye said "You owe me $200."

Continuing, witness said: "Mr. Canty then put one foot forward, and I thought he was going to hit Mr. Rye. Instead of hitting him, Mr. Canty placed his hand on the back of Mr. Rye's head, and began firing at Mr. Rye. There was one shot, then an interval, and three shots in quick succession."

"Where was Mr. Rye when the first shot was fired?" inquired Mr. Davis.
"On the sidewalk, facing Mr. Canty."
"Where was he when the second was fired?"
"On the sidewalk."

"And at the third shot?"
"Still on the sidewalk."
"And at the fourth shot?"
"Mr. Rye was still on the sidewalk," answered the witness.

"Then Mr. Rye was on the sidewalk while all four shots were fired?"
"Yes, sir," replied the witness promptly.

"Mr. Rye did not get off the sidewalk until he was last shot?"
"No, sir," replied the witness promptly.

A gigantic sale of shirt waists.

Again it has been left for us to lead the way. We have just completed what is, perhaps, the largest purchase of ladies' waists ever made in Washington. And beginning tomorrow morning we ask the ladies of this city to come and share what are without question the biggest and best values ever offered by any store up to this time.

The waists are those makes which have long been recognized as the best a woman can wear—such well known names as "Stanley," "Sunshine" and "Marquise" waists—the exponents of all that is desirable and stylish—the standards of excellence. The offering of them at prices that have been cut in twain is very extraordinary—an event in which every wise woman will want to participate. There is an immense assortment of styles to choose from—the newest and most correct styles of the season—the prettiest and most exclusive patterns created.

Regular 60c. shirt waists go for 30 cents.
Regular 75c. and $1 shirt waists go for 49 cents.

Choice of a splendid variety of ladies' white shirt waists made of new figured lawn and dimities in an immense number of the prettiest patterns, which were intended to sell at 60c.—for 30 cents.

Choice of this big lot—consisting of 225 dark and light shirt waists, made of new figured percales organdies and the like—the very prettiest and most attractive effects you can ever see—intended to sell at 75c. and $1.—for 49 cents.

Boys' shirt waists, 33c.

We've been doing some remarkable buying in the boys' behalf—mothers will be certain to appreciate it. A big special lot of boys' fine percale shirt waists, made of Garner's best indigo blue and colored percales—in all sizes from 4 to 14 years—go on sale Saturday morning, at 33 cents for choice of any. You can't begin to appreciate the value until you've seen the waists themselves. They'll give you a better idea of their splendid workmanship—pretty styles—and great worth—than a half page of talk.

Boys' wash suits, 79c.

We got a lot of 100 dozen boys' wash suits very much under price the other day—and we'll share our good luck with you mothers tomorrow. They are made of all linen crash, fancy Galatea cloth, in fast colors and plain duck bird's-eye, chevion in a large variety of the most beautiful styles. Some are richly trimmed with braid—all are finished with perfect taste. Not one is worth less than a dollar—while most of them are the regular $1.25 and $1.50 sorts. All sizes from 3 to 10 years. Choice tomorrow for 79 cents.

Boys' pants, 11c. Boys' blouse suits, 48c. Straw hats, 48c.

A lot of 45 dozen boys' washable Galatea cloth knee pants, in sizes from 3 to 12 years—strictly fast colors and made in a much more stylish manner than you would suppose possible at such low prices—will be offered Saturday along with the rest of the special values for 11 cents.

The first lot of the season of boys' and children's straw hats, in all the leading shapes and styles, plain dark and white straw and pretty mixed straws—which everybody else is asking 60c. for, will be here tomorrow for 48 cents.

Remarkable prices for wash suits and skirts.
