SWEET FLOWERS

(Continued from Sixth Page.) discouraging struggles, ragged, barefooted and disheartened, were going into winter quarters, with scarcely clothing enough to hide their nakedness, when Paul Jones captured the British transport Melish, with 10,000 uniforms, which he promptly brought into port and forwarded to Washington's needy army. At one time the continental army was running short of ammunition, when a British private was captured and brought in, with 15,000 barrels of powder.

The Navy in the War of 1812

Mr. Hoyt said: "In carrying on the splendid story of the navy from its deeds in the revolution under John Paul Jones, Richard Dale and their associates, through the war of 1812, we find the same self-reliant courage, the same skillful and daring seamanship, the same protection of American merchantmen, the same ships of the war of 1812 go on over all waters and seeking battle with the enemy wherever he might be found.

Events of Civil War

Referring to the civil war, the speaker said: "The enlistment, the muster in, then on Perry's Toothache Wax relieves that aching tooth. Be sure it is Perry's. All druggists, 10c.

in the war of 1812. At the close of the war our forces had captured nearly 2,500 vessels of all classes, mounting nearly 10,000 guns, a record far beyond the English achievements. In most of the actions the American superiority of force actually engaged was roughly as 10 to 8, but the American execution was as 10 to 2, fighting the most of the powers in and out of Christendom had in 200 instances been beaten only five times.

The exercises at the Soldiers' Home cemetery today were held amid the surroundings of natural beauty. Those who have been accustomed to attend the ceremonies of such occasions at this cemetery are inclined to think that each year the immediate surroundings of the memorial gatherings become more striking in the beauty of the sylvan scene as presented today.

The speakers' pavilion, which is a simple building with a clear, tall, supporting a roof, is at the foot of a grassy slope in the midst of a grove of forest trees. In this natural amphitheater the audience was gathered today, the seats provided being occupied, while many whose places on the lawn. On the raised platform were the members of St. Peter's choir, who furnished the music, the speakers and invited guests.

The exercises were begun promptly at 10 o'clock upon the arrival of the parade, which was headed by the band of the home. The committee in charge, officers of the home, those who took part in the exercises, Henry Wilson Post, No. 17, G. A. R., a garrison of the Army and Navy Union and veterans.

A musical selection was rendered by the band and then the senior vice commander of the G. A. R., G. H. Slaybaugh, chairman of the committee in charge of the services and the presiding officer of the day, called the assembly to order. In doing so he spoke as follows:

"We are gathered here to pay tribute to the memory and lay our offerings of flowers upon the graves of our comrades who sleep in the shade of yonder trees. Living they were the country's defenders; dead they are its heroes. Next to those who gave the nation its birth in the affections and grateful remembrance of its people are those who preserved its life, who made it in fact as in word the land of the free.

"They were the victors in a civil strife which eliminated from the minds of all the idea of a confederacy of states and cemented the Union with their blood into a compact, indestructible whole. Their success in arms inaugurated a period of development and prosperity unparalleled in the history of nations, and gave us a place among the greatest nations of the earth. And when war's alarm sounded in the so recent past it was their institutions that we turned to for aid and inspiration, when the men who wore the blue in '61 to '65 did not their younger brethren in arms were able to vanquish a powerful foe without a reverse.

"How pre-eminently fitting, therefore, that one day in the year should be set aside to honor the memory of those who may join in paying tribute to the memory of the preservers of our united country, and how fitting also that this day should be one of our nation's most beautiful and blossom and fruit give promise of a rich harvest, emblematic as it were of the results of their deeds upon the field of battle—our nation's heroes and their children, the generations which follow shall enter into the yet larger fruition of their achievements in the cause of freedom and stable government, and shall be taught a lesson of patriotism and devotion far beyond what it now inspires."

Prayer was offered by Rev. H. Allen Griffin, the chaplain of the home. A solo, "The Rest of the Brave," was sung by Miss Emma Houchen, and Lincoln's Gettysburg address was read by J. C. S. Burger, followed by Schubert's serenade, played by the band. "The Voices of the Flowers," a poem was read by the author, Dr. Thomas Schley, and then a quartet of St. Peter's choir sang.

EISEMAN BROS. COR. 7th AND E

since we came here one year ago to honor the dead, fifty graves have been added for our fallen comrades. Our Sgt. Maj. Evans, a man without fear and without reproach, a man to whom devotion to duty was as his religion; five veterans of the Mexican war, who were with us at last Memorial day, now restfully await here the sounding of that reveille. One of these Mexican heroes, an old dragoon, who carried his country's testimonial of his gallantry at Cerro Gordo—Thomas Cook—had entered upon his ninth decade of his long life. I recall how his comrades went with the band to serenade him on his ninetieth birthday, and how, shortly thereafter, he lay down and rendered up his spirit to God that gave it. It seemed almost as though the sweet notes of that serenade still lingered in the air to wait his spirit gently to the land of the living.

"We are all proud of our profession—a profession that impels men to acts of gallantry for their country and its cause; and we are proud of that companionship which binds us together as the comrades of men who have exalted their names by glorious heroism and sacrifice. We are gathered here, we are already at the head of the procession; our successors press hard upon us; they will be with us as before, with the three valleys and the farewell taps—the soldier's requiem. When in the future May morning comes, and the sun's rays scatter flowers above our heads, may they recall our records and our memories with tenderest regard in the hearts of those who are better for our lives, because we loved our country!

The concluding exercises. After a selection by the band, the closing prayer was offered by Rev. Father Hanigan, chaplain of the home. A salute was fired by a detail of artillerymen from the home, and after more music and the sounding of taps the exercises were brought to a close. The committee in charge was as follows: G. H. Slaybaugh, chairman; Commander John S. Hoover, Jacob Moore, J. M. Pipes, C. C. Hillings, W. S. Odell. Other committees were: Music, Commander George D. Ruggles, Brigadier General D. S. Stanley, Sergeant Major Henry Kerr, Post Commander Patrick Ford, Major E. A. Drake, and others.

Committee on decoration—Lafayette Relief Corps, No. 11, W. C. C., Mrs. Mary Mangum, president. The members of St. Peter's choir were: M. Lucius F. Randolph, Jr., conductor; Miss Dorothy Houchen, organist; Sopranos, Miss Hattie M. Ritchie, Mrs. Chas. P. Sweet, Miss Mary E. McMahon; altos, Miss Rose Baptista, Miss Mahon Callan; tenors, Mr. L. F. Randolph, Jr.; Mr. Chas. T. Sweet; basses, Mr. Ed. R. Fox, Mr. Jas. P. Eckert, Mr. Russell G. Abbott.

MORRIS POST IN CHARGE. Decoration Day Observances at Holy Rood and Oak Hill. The celebration of the day in Georgetown was more general than usual, and was conducted on a more elaborate scale than ever before. George U. Morris Post, No. 19, assisted by the Woman's Relief Corps, auxiliary to the post, had charge of the exercises. Shortly after 9 o'clock the march was begun, the members assembling in front of the post rooms in "Our Hall," on the corner of the city streets. The procession was headed by the 3d United States Cavalry Band from Fort Myer, followed by Company H of the Western High School, under Capt. Beach.

The line of march carried the procession to Holy Rood cemetery first, where special preparations had been made for the observance. The program consisted of a selection by the band, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," which was followed by the oration, delivered by Mr. Tracy L. Jeffords, former associate administrator of the post. Mr. Jeffords' address. Mr. Jeffords said in part: "The nation is what its freemen make it, and ours is the grandest in the world because our citizens make it such. The United States of America was founded upon right principles and has moved along right lines. The time has come, however, when that designation, United States of America, is not large enough to indicate the glory and extent of a country which is no longer confined to America or one hemisphere, but which in extent is almost world wide and in the grandeur of its policy and achievements is unequalled by any other nation."

Gen. Ruggles Extols Bravery. A solo was sung by Mr. Lucius F. Randolph, Jr., conductor of St. Peter's choir, and then Gen. George D. Ruggles, the governor, delivered an address. He spoke as follows: "The speaker pointed out the evidences afforded by the day and of these surroundings of the nation's remembrance of the dead and of the living. In referring to the future of the nation, he said that only the foundations and the outer walls of the national structure had been completed, and that in the future the temple of republican government would stand forth in all its beauty.

Mr. Jeffords' address. Mr. Jeffords said in part: "The nation is what its freemen make it, and ours is the grandest in the world because our citizens make it such. The United States of America was founded upon right principles and has moved along right lines. The time has come, however, when that designation, United States of America, is not large enough to indicate the glory and extent of a country which is no longer confined to America or one hemisphere, but which in extent is almost world wide and in the grandeur of its policy and achievements is unequalled by any other nation."

Gen. Ruggles Extols Bravery. A solo was sung by Mr. Lucius F. Randolph, Jr., conductor of St. Peter's choir, and then Gen. George D. Ruggles, the governor, delivered an address. He spoke as follows: "The speaker pointed out the evidences afforded by the day and of these surroundings of the nation's remembrance of the dead and of the living. In referring to the future of the nation, he said that only the foundations and the outer walls of the national structure had been completed, and that in the future the temple of republican government would stand forth in all its beauty.
