THE COST IN CASH

Most Important Question of the Dewey National Reception.

SYSTEMATIC COLLECTION SUGGESTED

Citizens Working Together Toward a Common Great Purpose.

THE PARADE COMMITTEES

The week closing has seen a very gratifying increase in activity on the part of the citizens having in charge the national reception to Admiral Dewey, and there is no doubt that the period intervening between now and his arrival will be crowded with work that will result in a splendid success for the celebration.

The Voluntary Contributions.

Table listing names and monetary contributions to the parade committees, including Hotel Raleigh, John R. McLean, John W. Thompson, etc.

It is confidently believed that least $2,000 will be added to the fund.

It is confidently believed that least $2,000 will be added to the fund by the contributions between this and the meeting Tuesday, including the latter. There is quite a variety of opinion as to whether the amount of $2,000 can be raised by voluntary subscription, but the prevailing sentiment seems to be that some systematic plan of collecting contributions to the Dewey national reception fund should be adopted, and it probably will be at the approaching meeting.

Parade Committees Announced.

Chairman of the Reception Committee announced the executive committee of his body as far as completed today and issued a call for it to meet at the Ames' building next Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The executive committee so far as formed is as follows: W. H. Rapley, chairman; Gen. Elliot, vice chairman; Albin Frankfort, secretary; Calvin C. Smith, treasurer; Frank H. Ford, C. E. Wood, George H. Harris, William M. Garrett, Major John T. Howe, etc.

KEEPING PROMISES

Policy of Washington Traction and Electric Company.

UNDERGROUNDING OVERHEAD WIRES

Free Medical Services to Be Provided for the Employees.

WORK ON ROCKVILLE ROAD

With the formal organization of the City and Suburban Railway Company by the officers of the Washington Traction and Electric Company the latter corporation becomes the owner of 166 miles of street and suburban railroads in the District of Columbia and nearby Maryland. The entire system, it was stated on the best authority yesterday, would be in complete operation by the opening of next year, the work on extension and the reconstruction of existing lines finished and everything thoroughly equipped in the best modern style.

Steel and Iron Delayed.

In the matter of reconstructing and rehabilitating the street railway and changing them to the underground electric as well as in improving and rebuilding the suburban lines and their extensions, the company has been confronted with the difficulty observable all over the country owing to the unusual demands upon the steel and iron manufacturers. All the contracts for iron and steel work were let a long time ago, and the work of construction is in the hands of Mr. E. Saxton and of White & Co. The limit for delivery on the part of the steel and iron men, in accordance with their contract, has been reached in some instances and is closely approaching in others.

The Extension to Rockville.

The work on the extension of the Washington and Rockville railway from Bethesda to Rockville has been seriously affected by an unexpected delay. The contractors on the new Washington and Rockville turnpike were engaged by the Traction and Electric Company to also grade the portion of the turnpike to be used by the electric line. They have been unable to do so, and yet when offered an advance of $50,000 to complete the work, they refused to accept the offer.

Medical Services Free for Employees.

The Traction and Electric Company has decided to regularly engage a competent and experienced physician to attend all its employees, and the members of their families free of cost to them.

The Company's Lines.

The street and suburban railway lines owned by the Traction and Electric Company, between all of which within the District limits transfers are given wherever they intersect or touch, are as follows: Metropolitan Railway Company, City and Suburban Railway Company, Columbia Railway Company, Annapolis and Annapolis River Railway Company, Washington and Great Falls Railway Company, Brightwood Railway Company, Georgetown and Potomac Railway Company, Washington and Glen Echo Railway Company and the Capital Railway Company.

NEARLY AS GOOD AS REGULARS.

Lieut. O'Flaherty Finishes the Reception. Lieut. O'Flaherty, 27th Infantry, was in Washington today and called at the War Department. He assured Gen. Corbin that the 27th was one of the best volunteer regiments he had ever seen, and even in the short time it had been organized was almost equal to a regular regiment. He said that the general efficiency of the regiment was due to the superior soldierly qualities of Col. James M. Bell, who has already made himself popular with both officers and men. Col. Bell was a major in the 1st Cavalry, and was severely wounded at Las Guasimas, the first fight of the Santiago campaign.

COMEDY AT RENNES

Audience Greatly Amused by Witnesses.

BERTILLON FINISHES HIS TALK

Col. Maurel's Testimony Called Into Question.

CAPT. FREYSTAETTER ON STAND

Dreyfus Maintains His Composure Under All Accusations.

PROCEEDINGS IN DETAIL.

RENNES, August 26.—M. Alphonse Bertillon, chief of the anthropometric department of the Paris prefecture of police, resumed his testimony before the Dreyfus court-martial this morning. M. Bertillon testified as a handwriting expert and gave his reason for believing Dreyfus to be the author of the famous bordereau, upon which the prosecution mainly depends to establish the charge against the prisoner.

RENNES, August 26.—M. Alphonse Bertillon, chief of the anthropometric department of the Paris prefecture of police, resumed his testimony before the Dreyfus court-martial this morning.

M. Bertillon testified as a handwriting expert and gave his reason for believing Dreyfus to be the author of the famous bordereau, upon which the prosecution mainly depends to establish the charge against the prisoner. The comic aspect of M. Bertillon's performance again appealed to the risibilities of the audience, though the judges paid close attention to his demonstrations, which were concluded at 8:30 a. m., the witness saying in a declaratory tone: "I am now convinced the writer of the bordereau is the prisoner sitting there."

Dreyfus heard him without flinching, and with an expression of disdain, which he showed in a still more noticeable manner just before the specialist's testimony, when M. Demange handed him a paper which M. Bertillon had submitted to the judges as convincing proof of the guilt of the accused.

Dreyfus heard him without flinching, and with an expression of disdain, which he showed in a still more noticeable manner just before the specialist's testimony, when M. Demange handed him a paper which M. Bertillon had submitted to the judges as convincing proof of the guilt of the accused.

There was a highly dramatic scene toward the end of the session.

Maitre Labri, leading counsel for the defense, asked to have Capt. Freystaetter, one of the members of the court-martial of 1894 which convicted Dreyfus, called in contradiction of the deposition of Col. Maurel, the presiding judge upon that occasion, who had testified that he only read one of the documents out of the secret dossier communicated to the court-martial.

Captain's Fine Appearance.

The major, who is a finely built officer and who has a handsome, honest face, as the platform with a firm step, and a fearless and confident bearing, called in contradiction of the deposition of Col. Maurel, the presiding judge upon that occasion, who had testified that he only read one of the documents out of the secret dossier communicated to the court-martial.

The witness was then questioned as to whether one or more of the documents were read, and he said they were all read.

This was in direct contradiction of Col. Maurel, and M. Labri at once demanded the confrontation of Capt. Freystaetter with Col. Maurel. The latter mounted the stage and presented a miserable object—his empty eyes bearing out beneath heavy eyebrows, and looking around him with a vicious hang-dog look.

"How do you explain this?" asked M. Labri.

"Then the colonel, at bay, replied savorily: 'I said I only read one document. I did not say only one document was read.'"

This statement called forth an outburst of hisses and indignant "ohs" from the audience, which looked upon it as an infamous confession.

The witness, trembling with shame, but evidently determined to fight to the last, threw a fierce look of hatred at M. Labri and the audience as the generalists shouted: "Silence! Silence!"

After this, the audience listened spellbound as Capt. Freystaetter, in a distinct bold voice, told exactly what the documents of the dossier were, and how Col. Maurel not only read these documents, but made comments on them. This was practically calling Maurel a thorough liar, and the colonel glared at the major fiercely. Capt. Freystaetter, however, was not dismayed, and his words, spoken in a tone of candor and fearlessness, must have carried conviction to every heart.

Mercier Asks to Be Heard.

General Mercier then asked to be heard, and placed himself at the side of Maurel. The forbidding appearance of these two men, both dressed in civilian attire, was in striking contrast with the erect, unflinching attitude of Freystaetter, who wore the smart uniform of a major of artillery, with medals on his breast.

It was a remarkable scene. General Mercier at once denied Capt. Freystaetter's declaration that the Parisian dispatch was contained in the dossier. "It is a lie," he said. (Tremendous sensation.)

Captain Freystaetter, however, was undaunted and replied firmly, looking Colonel Jousaust straight in the face: "I swear that what I have said is true."

"And," Freystaetter added, "I not merely remember the ditpatch, but I have a vivid recollection of the fact that the first words were, 'Dreyfus is arrested. Emissary warned.'"

This emphatic declaration increased the sensation.

General Mercier replied that he did not make up the dossier, which was made up by the late Colonel Bandrier, chief of the intelligence department.

M. Labri was hotly indignant at General Mercier's equivocation, and asked Colonel Jousaust again and again to have special
