How we make

CORBY'S "Mother's Bread."

It is immensely important to your health and that of your children to use bread which contains the largest percentage of gluten—the most nutritious portion of the grain.

We develop the gluten by our modern method of mixing. It's the only process obtaining such results. We use flour rich in glutinous properties.

DOUBLE TURRETS OPPOSED

ADMIRAL HICHBORN'S VIEWS ON THE SUBJECT.

Objections Are Almost Altogether From a Military Standpoint—The Heat and the Gases.

Notwithstanding the reported success of the superimposed turrets of the battle ship Kearsarge on her recent test, Admiral Highborn, chief of the bureau of construction and repair, has not changed his views as to their unsuitability for military purposes.

"There is an old saying that 'It is the unexpected that happens,' and many years of experience in ship design and construction has so far convinced me of the truth of this saying that I am always on the alert to look out for the 'unexpected,' otherwise the accidental.

"In the last war the vessels of our navy fulfilled all that was required of them in the line of design and construction, despite the intricate mechanism of the modern warship, with its steam, hydraulic, electric and pneumatic auxiliaries, and the result would have been otherwise had the two battle ships fitted with the double or superimposed turrets been in service.

"Designs for the three battle ships, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Georgia, authorized by the last Congress, have not yet been commented on, but a suggestion, I believe, has been made that they be constructed with double turrets, as in the case of the Kearsarge and the Kearsarge. The objects sought to be attained by such a design are concentration of the main battery, and the possibility of covering a greater arc of fire with the guns distributed in single turrets.

"These are theoretical advantages, which, I believe, would be found of little or no use in actual practice. The Kearsarge and the Georgia, so far as the double turrets are concerned, are as yet untried, but although they were mounted in separate turrets, some years ago, no other nation has deemed it desirable to incorporate it in the construction of their battle ships.

"Objections to Double Turrets. The objections to its use are by no means of a theoretical nature, but are based on the concentration of weight and the necessity for supplying ammunition to two sets of guns through one revolving structure, it is, of course, somewhat more of a problem to install a double turret, but the difficulties in the way, so far as structural matters are concerned, have been overcome by the bureau of construction and repair on the Kearsarge and Georgia, and from all accounts the double turrets on these ships are thoroughly well adapted to their use under excellent control as regards rotation.

"The objections to the double turret, from my point of view, are almost altogether military, and may be summarized in a few words. I believe that the offensive efficiency of both the eight-inch and twelve-inch guns is materially less than if they were mounted in separate turrets, owing to their mutual interference and lack of independent control. Furthermore, I believe that the armament point is made more vulnerable than if independent turrets were adopted. It is true that the ammunition supply of the eight-inch turret is somewhat better protected than that of the twelve-inch, but in eight-inch turrets, as usually installed, the ammunition supply is very thoroughly protected in any case. Assuming that the turret is to be made as vulnerable as if independent turrets were adopted, there is no question that the eight-inch turret would be disabled in action, while it is almost certain that if the eight-inch turret were disabled the twelve-inch would also be incapacitated.

"Moreover, the eight-inch guns, training as they do, are serviceable for attack only in the case of the twelve-inch, and, therefore, for the time being, virtually out of commission as against a more vulnerable point of the opposing vessel or vessel.

"Heat and the Gases. "At Santiago the heat at the guns was so great that many of the men serving them fainted; at Manila Dewey's officer in charge of the firing had to come outside the turret of the Olympia in order to heat the gun and see the smoke away from the turret and the poisonous gases so thick in the turret and the conditions as to poisonous fumes worse than ever.

"Both heat and gases would soon become insufferable in a closed turret where four guns were firing rapidly.

"A noted officer, when the question of smoke in turrets was under discussion, suggested to leave the top off and let the smoke out, a suggestion which would be quite impracticable when it came to leaving off the upper turret.

"The double turret places upon one man the responsibility for the training of three or four heavy guns, a circumstance which in itself seems a conclusive argument against success, for such responsibility is, in my opinion, beyond human endurance in the excitement of battle, with the turrets filled with heated and poisonous vapors—it is a task which would be almost impossible to perform, and the rapid concentration fire which was relied upon will fail to materialize, as does the much-vaunted speed of an over-loaded ship."

INSTRUCTED TO VOTE FOR BRYAN.

Pennsylvania State Democratic Convention for the Nebraska Man.

The Pennsylvania democratic state convention, in Harrisburg, yesterday instructed the sixty-four delegates from Pennsylvania to the democratic national convention in Kansas City to support William J. Bryan for President. They are bound by the unit vote and cannot change to any other presidential candidate unless it be so decided by a majority of the delegation.

The platform strongly indorses Bryan's candidacy, denounces the war policy of the McKinley administration and advocates numerous state reforms.

The following ticket was nominated: Auditor General—P. Gray McKee of Center County.

Representatives-at-large—Harry E. Grim of Bucks county and N. M. Edwards of York county.

Electors—Gen. A. H. Croft of Somerset, Otto Germer of Erie, Francis Shunk Brown of Philadelphia and Andrew Knell of Elk.

Delegates-at-large to the national convention—Col. James M. Guffey of Pittsburgh, Gov. Robert E. Pattison of Philadelphia, Gen. John K. Keener of Lancaster, John A. Rufus K. Polk of Danville, Charles J. Reilly of Williamsport, ex-Representative John M. Kerr of Clearfield, ex-Secretary John M. Garman of Nanticoke and Representative William H. Snowden of Allegheny.

The platform begins with a demand for a careful and thorough revision of the tariff, and declares in favor of such duties only as are necessary for the economic administration of public affairs.

Faithful enforcement of the anti-trust act is demanded, and opposition to what is termed the Imperialist Administration is announced. Home rule for the Philippines under the protection of the United States is favored. It is demanded that the army be withdrawn from Cuba, and that Congress observe the pledge made to that people.

Continuing it says: "We demand for the people of Porto Rico the right of freely importing and exporting to and from any part of the United States, and we denounce the sinister influences that have caused the President to depart from that which he has promised as a 'plain duty.'"

It further says: "We announce the Hay-Pauncefote treaty as a complete abandonment of the claims of our statesmen of our right to construct an inter-oceanic canal, and as an un-American and base surrender of our inherent right of self-defense.

permanent the prosperity of the country and "freeing us from the power of the money trust."

Sympathy for the Boers is extended. The appointment of M. S. Quay as United States Senator by Gov. Stone is denounced in strong terms.

The platform concludes with a tribute to William J. Bryan, and invites him to become President of the United States, and the support of the Pennsylvania democracy.
