Figures Went Wrong. SOMETHING ABOUT FOOD THAT SAVES ONE FROM BRAIN FOG. "That food can make or break a man is shown in thousands of cases. If one's work requires the use of the brain, the food must furnish particles that will build up the brain and replace the daily loss."

Many times people fall ill not knowing that the real cause of the trouble is the lack of the right kind of food to keep the body nourished. As an illustration: A young man in Chatham, Va., says: "I have been ill for the last six months in a large tobacco warehouse here. My work required a great deal of calculating, running up long and tiresome columns of figures. Last winter my health began to fail and I lost from two to ten days out of every month. I gradually got worse instead of better. It was discovered that when I did work many mistakes were made. It was, of course, brain fog and the food. After dragging along for several months I finally gave up my position, for every remedy on earth that I tried seemed to make me worse instead of better, and I had to give up what food I ate, having to see meal time come."

"One day a friend said, 'Order, do you know there is a food called Grape-Nuts, that you believe is made of just such cases as yours?' The name rather attracted me and I tried the food. The delicious, sweetish taste pleased me and I nibbled it. In about a week my old color began to come back and I gained in strength every day. My health began to improve and I tried the food, and with the strength came the desire to work, and when I went back I found that my mind was as accurate as ever and ready to tackle anything."

I now can do as much work as any man, and know exactly from what my benefit was derived, and that is from Grape-Nuts. I feel that it is not false and just that my experience be known." R. P. Order, Chatham, Va.

The Beginnings of Lynch Law. From the Atlantic. Colonel Lynch's proceedings in Bedford the legislature pronounced to be illegal but justifiable, were imitated in other parts of the state, and came to be known by the name of Lynch's law. In justice to Colonel Lynch it should be remembered that his action was taken at a time when the state was in the throes of a hostile invasion. Thomas Jefferson, then the governor of the state, was proving himself peculiarly incompetent in his position. The whole executive department was in a state of partial paralysis. It was, therefore, no spirit of insubordination or disregard of the law that induced Lynch to act as he did. There were few men living more inclined than this simple Quaker farmer to render due respect in word and deed to the established authorities.

But the seed that had been sown sprang up and bore evil fruit. When a legislative body has expressly admitted that circumstances may arise under which breaches of the law are justifiable, it has enunciated a dangerous principle. It struck deep root in the minds of Lynch's fellows on the western frontier and southward. It is the principle on which it is attempted to justify the practice of lynching to the present day; men believe that circumstances may arise under which measures, though not strictly warranted by law, are justifiable from the nature of the case. And those circumstances are those which, in fact, consist in the weakness of the executive.
