Special Dispatch to The Star. DETROIT, Mich., May 18.—Becoming desperate because of two failures to get on the diamond in as many days, Manager Stahl agreed with Manager Armour yesterday that it would be well to play on any old sort of field, as long as the rain did not fall.

The bad field helped Detroit to runs, but does not, of course, explain entirely the defeat. That was due to Washington's inability to hit the local pitcher, Knott.

The Nationals had chances to bat in enough men to win three games. Killian took all kinds of chances in his efforts to induce Washington to get at least one, and as a result walked no less than nine men, in addition to Huelmsman, who was hit by a pitched ball.

Washington pitched to Knott, and Knott pitched to the Nationals once filling them up and forcing a man to that sack. Three times Washington had two men on, but they were always at second and first bases.

Hunter Hill got the first of Washington's hits in the opening inning, and died trying to steal, after Stahl had fanned. In the second inning both Huelmsman and Hill were walked, but Knott failed to left, and Knott was the real chance. Patten got a base on balls and Jones forced him. Hill was an easy in-field out. Schaefer juggled Stahl's grounder, Jake stepped on the ball.

Knott walked to left, and Knott passed first. The ninth was the only inning in which Washington failed to put a man on.

Detroit's first batter scored, Schaefer walking, being sacrificed to second, and talking on Crawford's clean single. The mud ball play was under the reception of Hickman hit to left, and Huelmsman lost the bounds, making it good for two bases.

O'Leary undertook to sacrifice, and Hill's sacrifice was successful. Hickman scored. Sullivan tried to sacrifice, and Hill, who covered first, slipped in the mud, Patten's perfect throw got right field. O'Leary's third, and Knott's sacrifice, Sullivan to second. With Schaefer out on an in-field fly, Cooley singled to center, scoring two runs.

AMERICAN LEAGUE GAMES. St. Louis, 3; New York, 1.

The St. Louis American team took yesterday's game from the New Yorks by a score of 3 to 1. Young Hogg was again sent to the firing line for the New Yorks and allowed to remain in the game for seven innings, when Charles Griffith replaced him.

Two battery errors by Hogg in the first inning, followed by a two-bagger, gave the Browns two runs. This proved sufficient to win the game without the additional run gathered in the sixth, off a two-bagger, a steal and an out. The only tally scored by the New Yorks was in the initial inning, on a free pass, a steal and a rap to center.

The New Yorks are sadly crippled. With Elberfeld and Chesbro both out of the game on account of ill health and Patten in poor condition, Griffith is up against it. The score:

ROLICKING BASE BALL. Evening Star Team Beat Times in Humorous Contest.

Few base ball games have been more entertaining or have aroused greater enthusiasm among the rooters than the battle royal between the teams representing the Washington Times and the Evening Star at the National Park yesterday afternoon.

There were long hits galore, enough purloining of bases to have put both teams in the "enabosse," and errors—but the mantle of charity should be drawn over that column. There were also a few good plays, whether made by accident or design is a matter of conjecture; nevertheless, when the smoke of battle had cleared away at the close of the ninth inning and the shades of night were enveloping the field, the score stood 18 to 5 in favor of The Star boys.

It was worth the price of admission to a "regular" ball game to have witnessed the "enabosse" of the evening yesterday afternoon, and the adherents of the two teams, while comparatively few in numbers, were as full of noise and enthusiasm as the Gotham band at a prize contest. There were made up from the employees in the various departments of the two newspapers, and the positions and attitudes assumed by the players in the field at the bat and when chasing after the elusive fly-ball would have qualified them for jobs in most any first-class circus. Some of the pencil pushers made a specialty of leers, while the pressmen tried to squeeze the leather sphere into a pulp, and left their imprint on the cover at every cast.

Mystified expressions marked the countenances of the newspaper men when, after getting their eyes on the pitched ball, they swung with terrific energy at the leather sphere, and made a specialty of leers, while the pressmen tried to squeeze the leather sphere into a pulp, and left their imprint on the cover at every cast.

Representatives of the business office went after everything in sight, and seemed chagrined that they were not allowed to carry their bats with them around the bases. The composers were great on "pick-ups" and made a specialty of leers, while the pressmen tried to squeeze the leather sphere into a pulp, and left their imprint on the cover at every cast.

AMERICAN LEAGUE GAMES. St. John's College, 9; Western High School, 3.

Farell's pitching, combined with good stick work on the part of St. John's proved the downfall of Western High on the east side of the National Park yesterday afternoon. Each pitcher is credited with the same number of strike outs, passes to first and men hit by the ball. St. John's got a total of thirteen hits off Hodgson's delivery, while Western could only connect safely with three of Farell's benders. It was a clean contest throughout, but the collegians outbatted the boys from across the creek. The official score:
