DEADLINE FOR PEACE

Representative Barthold's Address Before Missourians.

APPEAL TO ARBITRATION

"Law and Order in International Relations."

THE PREVENTION OF ANARCHY

Speaker's Colleagues in Congress

Among His Auditors—Program of Entertainment Follows.

A strong plea for international and lasting peace was made by Representative Richard Barthold of Missouri in an address delivered last evening before the Missouri Society in Pythian Hall. The audience listened with close attention to the impressive appeal for arbitration and reason instead of brute force in settling differences between the nations. The speaker declared that the problem would be solved if the great powers could be brought to make adequate arbitration treaties and to establish a permanent international court.

The officers of the Missouri Society are: W. Deane, president; A. Leavitt, vice president; O. W. Wyatt, second vice president; H. J. Phelps, secretary, and L. P. Shidy, treasurer.

The fishing shores in this section are being laid out for the benefit of the people. It is stated that the prospects are bright for securing an abundance of fish.

TROOPER KELLY TRIED

ARRESTED FOR INSULTING MISS JORDAN OF BALLSTON.

Court-Martial Proceedings at Fort Myer—Better Order to Be Maintained.

A court-martial met at Fort Myer yesterday to try Private J. L. Kelly of Troop F, 13th United States Cavalry, on four charges, growing out of the alleged insult to and hold-up of the daughters of Mr. E. L. Jordan of Ballston, Va., by soldiers from the fort on the evening of January 19. Several soldiers were arrested as a result of an investigation by the commanding officer of the post. The investigation was instituted by direction of President Roosevelt. Only one man—Kelly—was held for trial.

Miss Jordan, accompanied by her father and the young man who was with her when it is alleged, she was insulted by the soldiers, visited the fort and the arrested men were taken before them. The only one who was held for trial was Kelly, who was held for court-martial, the others being released from arrest.

Kelly was tried on four charges, but it is not clear what he was found guilty of but two of them. These embraced conduct unbecoming a soldier and to the prejudice of good order and military discipline by obstructing the free passage of Miss Jordan and her sister and using profane and insulting language in the presence of ladies and to them.

Statement by an Officer.

An officer at the fort stated last night to a Star reporter that the offense was much less than that which was reported, and that Kelly had been shown to be the principal aggressor. In resenting the action of the young man who was with the ladies in requesting them to move away from the soldiers, Kelly, it is alleged, indulged in the use of profane language.

The findings of the court have been forwarded to the reviewing officer. Miss Jordan and the young man appeared at the trial yesterday as witnesses against Kelly. The army officers at Fort Myer and the big majority of the soldiers there say they deplore the unpleasant incident. It is understood that the proper authority will be sought to guard the Aqueduct bridge and reservation in the future against unpleasant happenings. This guard, it is said, will be maintained by military authorities.

Discipline to Be Enforced.

The lines of discipline will be drawn tighter on prisoners in the guard house and they will not be allowed cigarettes and other luxuries which it is said have been heretofore passed surreptitiously to them by comrades. In other words, an officer said, the guard house will be made a place more to be feared in the future. The officers will check up more closely on the reasons from all soldiers who want "check passes" to leave the post, and they will be careful regarding whom such passes are issued. The proper authority will be absent from the reservation when the non-commissioned officer goes through the quarters to check up on the soldiers.

It is also said that Maj. Sylvester, superintendent of the isthmus, will cause an additional police patrol to be sent to the isthmus, and the District police authority extends to high-water mark on the Virginia shore of the Potomac. A detail of bicycle policemen, it was added, be provided to patrol the bridge. The bicycle men will be required to "pull in" regularly on the hour from the boxes at each end of the bridge.

Every step is to be taken by the police, it is intimated, to prevent a repetition of the Jordan affair, and the laws relating to unlawful assembly and disorderly conduct will be rigidly enforced.

NEW YORK'S STATE CAPITOL.

Assembly Staircase Declared Unsafe—Investigation of Building Suggested.

ALBANY, N. Y., January 27.—The assembly staircase in New York's $30,000,000 capitol, which has been under suspicion for several months, was ordered closed today on the ground that it is unsafe for use. It is believed by those familiar with the conditions that the situation is exceedingly serious and that the best part of the building will be out of use for two or three years while repairs are being made.

The engineers have informed the state architect that the staircase is a "shaky building as a whole should be investigated, including tests of the foundations."

POLICEMAN KILLED HIMSELF.

Ante-Mortem Statement—He Had Been Hounded to Death.

ST. LOUIS, January 27.—Policeman John A. Scollard, who shot himself yesterday rather than go before the police board and answer charges of immorality, died last night.

Before his death he dictated a statement in which he declared he had been hounded to death by false reports concerning him.

VIRGINIA NOMINATIONS.

Resolution to Be Offered Asking Senators Pertinent Question.

Special Dispatch to The Star.

RICHMOND, Va., January 27.—The senate today in executive session took up the recess nominations of the governor, two of a large batch failing to receive confirmation. The two to be "passed by" were E. B. Godwin and J. W. B. Godwin, a member of the board of visitors to the Eastern State Hospital, and R. Hunter Beasley of South Boston, for trustee of the state normal school. Mr. Beasley is editor of a small country weekly paper. The other nominations were confirmed, among them being a gentleman who is said to have voted the republican ticket at several national elections.

Senator Camm Patterson today gave out an interview in which he said he would on Monday offer a resolution calling on Senators Daniel and Martin to answer why they had not obeyed the expressed will of the voters of Virginia and introduced and supported an amendment to the federal Constitution looking to the election of United States senators by the people. He also said that had such a provision obtained three men who have disgraced that body would not have been permitted to enter the senate.

Pinehurst Season.

Special Dispatch to The Star.

PINEHURST, N. C., January 27.—The week has seemed quiet in contrast with the gaily and interest incidental to the big golf tournaments of the preceding one. The golfers were introduced and enjoyed excellent sport; the trap shooters are busy, and interest in pistol shooting is opening up well. Golf and tennis claim attention from many of the sportsmen. Events are being arranged in addition to the stated tournament program.

WORK HIGHLY PRAISED

CHAS. BERTONCINI EULOGIZES OPERATIONS ON THE ISTHMUS.

Mr. Charles Bertoncini of Panama is in Washington, having come here from the isthmus at the request of the board of consulting engineers of the canal commission. Mr. Bertoncini has been in Panama since 1881, being called there from Central America by those in charge of the French company that undertook the work and quit. He spent two years walking over Central America, or a part of it, and then went to the isthmus. He did the isthmus on foot, too, and from that intimate acquaintance with that country came his invitation from the board of consulting engineers.

"The United States," he said last night when seen by a Star reporter, "is going about the building of this big ditch in a practical way. People up here say that the progress slow, but they have no conception of the many obstacles to be overcome. Men who have been away from the isthmus for a length of time would scarcely know it now. Under the energetic and intelligent direction of Col. Gorgas, in charge of the sanitary department, the completion of the isthmus is far as the work concerned, has improved almost immeasurably. There is no justification for the evident distrust of the people of the states as to the danger of going to the isthmus to live.

"A man has to be temperate down there, not to get drunk by eating. If he does that—if he shows ordinary common sense in the treatment of his physical self—he will live as long there as he will anywhere else. The houses prepared for the workmen are good; they are dry and clean, at least those built by the United States. Some of the houses of the French company are not what they should be, but even these have been put in fairly good condition.

"This question of a lock or sea level canal is only one of time and money. Both are feasible. The sea level canal will take about ten years longer to construct and will cost at least a hundred millions more. Most of the workmen down there are West India negroes, and they are living in their own homes. It is the comparative lack of doing at home and before they find out they cannot they are bedridden. There is no need for any one to be afraid of the climate if he is careful, and there is plenty of work to be done down there and there is good pay ready for the man who is not afraid to work.

"Mr. Bertoncini hopes to be relieved from duty here and to return to the isthmus within the next few days. He wants to get back to the isthmus, for he says he is in the life there. These cold days up north, as he calls Washington, go clear through his bones. He has been in the health department of the United States in Panama.

Norfolk Damage Suit Compromised.

Special Dispatch to The Star.

NORFOLK, Va., January 27.—The $100,000 damage suit of Ralph P. Gage, a former Norfolk attorney, now living in Denver, Col., against Thomas H. Robbins, a builder of Washington, D. C., was settled here today by compromise. The Washington defendant, who was in court, not objecting to a judgment for $150, and agreeing to pay one-half the costs of the case. The suit was brought here some months ago. Mr. Robbins was a former client of Attorney Gage, and it was alleged by Gage that Robbins charged him with using sharp practice on him. The action was one for alleged slander. The case was not set today for trial on its merits, the question being to settle how much of Robbins' money Gage had tied up in Norfolk on attachment proceedings, Gage claiming $3,300 and Robbins only $300. Mr. Brandeth of Washington, who claimed a portion of the attached money, was here to testify, but prior to the calling of the case the attorneys got together. It being evident from the present health of Attorney Gage that he would not again be able to return to Norfolk, his counsel agreed to a compromise and the matter was settled. Judge S. Herbert Giesy of Washington and W. W. Starke of Norfolk appeared for Robbins. Judge Giesy, Mr. Robbins and Mrs. Brandeth returned to Washington tonight.

Richard Barthold.

gress, to be the court of last resort for the adjudication of all contentions between one country and another.

The subject was "Law and Order in International Relations." Many members of Congress were present.

Leadership in Peace Movement.

When the Interparliamentary Union met at St. Louis in 1904 Mr. Barthold was elected president of that great organization, and this distinction carried with it the practical leadership in this country of the forces which make for international peace. The organization in Congress of a branch of the union above referred to is due to Mr. Barthold's initiative, and this branch or group is now composed of nearly two-thirds of the membership of the House of Representatives.

Mr. Barthold began his address with a description of what peace is today and what it should be. Ever since peace was established, under present conditions, he said, it was merely an armistice with no guarantee of its lasting qualities. A single incident could disturb it at any moment and upon the least provocation. While in the ordinary affairs of life even rulers were subjected to the law which provides for the adjudication of differences by courts, in a question of peace and war the will and whim of rulers still recognizes as the sole arbitrator in cases so vitally affecting the happiness, treasury and life of a people.

The lecturer chided and decried in order to arouse the proper war spirit, and he pointed to the fact that even in a republic such tricks might be played for party advantage.

The Objects Sought.

"The object of the modern peace movement," said Mr. Barthold, "is to substitute for this fallacious peace, lasting peace conditions, by which international agreements which could only be broken by one nation rebelling against the will of all the others. In other words, law and order in international relations should be substituted for what he described as the present state of anarchy. Before the Franco-German war the military budget of Europe amounted to about $28,000,000 annually. In 1893 they were double that amount, and now their total is more than $1,400,000,000 a year. In 1889 Lord Salisbury, then British premier, transmitted these figures to the German emperor, who, as report has it, was so shocked by them as to immediately declare his intention to convene an international congress to consider means of relief. But at that time France objected, and the project fell through."

Measures Proposed.

Mr. Barthold then discussed the measures to attain this end. He said great progress had of late been made in bringing the problem down from the cloudy domain of theory to the solid ground of practical statesmanship. It was necessary first to remove opposition to the plans of the peace people. Victor Hugo once said "that peace is the virtue, war the crime of civilization." If this be true, then it should be the duty of every good man and woman to help promote the cause of peace in order that virtue might be enthroned upon the ruins of crime. Yet there were many doubting Thomases, and that constituted the greatest possible impediment to the progress of the movement. There were also those who considered it their duty to help in the prohibition of manliness and heroism, which theory reduced to its last analysis would destroy the manly arena as the arena of the proper ideal for us to worship.

"And there is," the speaker exclaimed, "more real heroism displayed every day in times of peace than there ever is in times of war. To strike a blow in wrath is simply an exhibition of the animal passion, but to manfully restrain that natural passion, to every natural right in order to help our neighbor, if civilization means anything it means self-restraint, and the desire of our natural rights in order to help our neighbor is enabled to enjoy his. On this basis society has been organized everywhere and human law has superseded natural law to that extent named, and it is our duty to maintain it with all our might and energy. It is certainly a humiliating confession that the rule of law is not everywhere."

War as Natural Condition.

Mr. Barthold then addressed himself to those who believe war to be a natural condition, a condition due to the inexorable laws of nature. War, they hold, is a question of food or wealth, and therefore always justifiable. The logical conclusion of this theory is that "might is right."

"This class leaves an important factor out of their calculation," said the speaker, "the compact, the agreement, the law of civilized society by which the reign of brute force was made to give way to the reign of reason. We must surrender part of our natural rights in order to help our neighbor be enabled to enjoy his. On this basis society has been organized everywhere and human law has superseded natural law to that extent named, and it is our duty to maintain it with all our might and energy. It is certainly a humiliating confession that the rule of law is not everywhere."

NEW FRENCH PRESIDENT.

Nation Said to Show Much Wisdom in Selecting Him.

Special Telegram to The Star.

PARIS, January 27.—The wisdom and common sense of the French people in selecting M. Fallieres as the successor to M. Loubet. The office of president in France, restricted in power as it is by the legislature and by the parliamentary form of executive government, requires above all in the man who holds it, tact, moderation and a quality of compromise. These qualities have been shown by M. Fallieres. He has many ministerial posts he had held, always those involving the administration of internal affairs of his country and in the long time he has spent in the senate. Politics played no part in the election. It would be difficult to point out that there are even shades of difference between the French and the German emperors, and the somewhat safer man has been preferred to the more brilliant.

M. Fallieres has been the advocate of friendship between France and Great Britain, and undoubtedly will do all in his power to strengthen the entente cordiale.

Russian Countess a Milliner.

Special Telegram to The Star.

GENEVA, January 27.—A cafe proprietor here advertised for a waitress recently, and among the replies he found a pathetic appeal from a Russian countess for work. She said that her husband had been killed at Riga, and that as a result of the Russian troubles even their house had been destroyed by fire. She succeeded in making her escape with her child, and having spent the little money she had, they were near starvation. She begged for the right to employ herself as to the truth of the young widow's story, obtained for her a post in a milliner shop here.

England and Germany.

Special Telegram to The Star.

HAMBURG, January 27.—Herr A. Dunccker, the well-known author, has just published a pamphlet dealing with the relations between Great Britain and Germany. He says that as things stand, England is animated with hostile feelings toward Germany because she believes that her existence is threatened, though she is in part mistaken. In his case, Herr Dunccker believes that the best way of averting a war between the two countries is unyielding firmness and armed readiness on the German side.

Missionary in Turkey Dead.

POSTON, January 27.—The American board of commissioners for foreign missions received a cablegram today announcing the death of Mrs. Edward F. Carey, a missionary at Harpoot in eastern Turkey. She died of typhoid fever on January 25, 1906, at the age of 57. She was married in Princeton, Ill., in 1875.
