GRAND MASTERS' WORK

Efforts of Men in Supreme Masonic Authority

FOR THE TEMPLE PROJECT

Story of Progress Made Related in the Annual Reports.

WILLING ALLEGIANCE GIVEN

Ornament to Nation's Capital—Noble and Glorious Enterprise—Pursuance of the Site.

The new Masonic Temple project, although the temple has long been the dream and hope of the fraternity, only began to take tangible form ten years ago. During that period ten able men have held the supreme Masonic authority, each and all of whom have devoted themselves earnestly and effectively to the work, and to whom all Masonic organizations have given willing allegiance. The story of the progress of the Masonic enterprise to the point where, upon the close of the Masonic May festival, the temple will actually begin to rise, is an interesting one. It can be read in a brief review of the reports of the several grand masters who have been in the Grand East, as Masons express it, during these ten years.

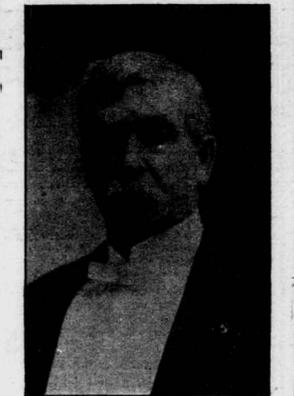

This most important event, in his report, were modest enough in view of its prominence in the work. He said: "During the year much progress was made in the direction of building the new temple. Contributions have been used in the purchase of the site. I cannot too strongly urge upon the fraternity the completion of a project so auspiciously begun."

Matthew Trimble—1897.
During the administration of Grand Master Matthew Trimble the general convention of Masonic bodies was organized, and late in the term preparations made for the first fair. In his report Mr. Trimble said: "It gives me great pleasure to note the activity that is being manifested in connection with the proposed new Masonic temple. All indications point to a speedy and successful effort in behalf of this noble and glorious enterprise, and I sincerely trust that in the near future an imposing edifice will be completed, consecrated to Masonic purposes, and of such a character as to reflect credit upon the enterprise and liberality of the brethren of this jurisdiction and the craft in general."

William G. Henderson—1900.
Grand Master Henderson reported that the officers of the association for the new temple were working industriously for the success of the enterprise. He reported the disposition of $87,500 in stock of the enterprise to the various Masonic bodies, and followed with suggestions as to the disposition of additional stock.

Harry Standford—1901.
Grand Master Harry Standford was prominent in arranging the preliminaries for the second and very successful fair of 1902, and said in his annual report: "As the members of the committee in charge are well known for their energy, experience and good taste, this enterprise certainly looks

George W. Baird—1896.
Rear Admiral George W. Baird, who was grand master of Masons ten years ago, in the opening address of his term emphasized the importance of prompt, active, energetic and combined efforts looking to the erection of a new temple which should be an ornament to the national capital. "It is hoped," he said, "that before the end of the present Masonic year shall have terminated a suitable site will be selected in a desirable section of our beautiful city for that purpose." He also expressed the hope that he might have the honor of laying the corner stone of a future magnificent structure in company with his officers.

Samuel C. Palmer—1898.
In his opening address Grand Master Samuel C. Palmer said: "You are all aware of the steps which have been taken in furtherance of this great and glorious enterprise, especially the great fair to be held in April to assist the project. The management is in the hands of a committee of the representatives of the various Masonic bodies of this jurisdiction. Details of the undertaking are rapidly assuming form, and promise to result in a substantial success. Let us hope the new temple may speedily arise, and prove a thing of beauty and a joy forever."
At the close of his term the grand master was able to report the great success of the Masonic fair of April, 1902, and the completion of the first great forward step in temple building, which occurred coincident with the declaration of war against Spain. He said: "The fair was a complete success, and the profits resulting from a substantial nucleus for the fund necessary to construct a new temple in this city."

Harry Standford—1901.
Grand Master Harry Standford was prominent in arranging the preliminaries for the second and very successful fair of 1902, and said in his annual report: "As the members of the committee in charge are well known for their energy, experience and good taste, this enterprise certainly looks

George H. Walker.
no more delay than necessary will be permitted in beginning and completing the great work they have in hand."

James A. Wetmore—1904.
Grand Master James A. Wetmore said: "I know of no subject which appeals more strongly to the interests of the members of the entire fraternity in this jurisdiction than the project for a new temple, and yet while there is doubtless a need for quarters more in keeping with the dignity, importance and requirements of our growing numbers, it is a cause of congratulation to be able to feel that, although the Masonic Temple Association has all along had in its composition and make-up among the requisite enthusiasm to undertake and carry through successfully anything within reason, their enthusiasm has been tempered with a proper amount of conservatism to insure that there will be no hasty or ill-considered action taken; that there will be no steps backward, but that every step taken by them will result in our drawing nearer to the consummation of our desires, the fulfillment of our hopes, and the supplying of our needs."

Lurtin R. Ginn—1905.
Grand Master Lurtin R. Ginn, who retired from office last year, devoted a great part of his energies to the Masonic Temple project and took an active part by addresses at visitations and other functions in bringing about the sentiment, which at the close of his term brought out the adoption of the resolution by the Grand Lodge, under which the May festival is about to merge into progress.
The temple will be built, and the fraternity will long honor the able grand master during whose administrations the work has progressed.

Degree Conferred.
Drs. W. J. Howard and Charles H. Marshall and Revs. J. C. Dent and J. I. Loving have returned from the commencement exercises and the alumni at the Virginia Union University, Richmond, Va., at which time the degree of doctor of divinity was conferred upon Rev. Junius I. Loving of this city, pastor of the Union Baptist Church.

ADDRESS BY FAIRBANKS.

To Members of M. E. Conference South at Birmingham.

The feature of yesterday's session of the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South at Birmingham, Ala., was the address last night by Vice President Fairbanks, fraternal delegate from the Northern Methodist Episcopal Church. The immense auditorium of the First Church was packed to hear the address, and hundreds were turned away, unable to gain entrance.
Congratulating Birmingham upon having become the Pittsburg of the south, the Vice President said that to the natural advantages for a great industrial development must be added stable conditions, righteous laws administered with sober judgment, so as to inspire men with confidence. He said that communities which are great and strong are not built up alone upon the present, but they are also erected upon confidence in the future. Continuing, he said: "We must see that our laws are not dictated by passion or prejudice; that they are inspired by exalted purpose; that they are to bear upon all with impartiality; that favors are not to be granted to one and denied to another; that the way shall be open for each and every American with absolute impartiality in the race of life."
"We should beware of the blighting effects of hysteria. We should avoid it in either the enactment of our laws or in their enforcement. Our interests are too mighty and our destiny too great to give ourselves over to the unthinking, to the opportunist, to those who take no thought of today and tomorrow. We have attained to the leadership of the world because we have been a great, level-headed, conservative people; because we have deliberated upon the great questions of humanity, of trade and commerce; because we have mastered them. We have progressed as a people because we have solved the problems of the hour in the light of the great fundamental principles which were bequeathed to us by our fathers."
Conditions may change, but principles of justice are immutable as fate. So long as we adhere to them, so long as we make our course square with them, we cannot go astray.

PIONEER MAIL CLERK ARRESTED

Confessed to Robbery After Forty Years of Service.

After having served forty years in the postal service Daniel S. Peterson, sixty-three years old, a veteran and a pensioner of the civil war and night superintendent of Station H, at the Grand Central station, in New York City, was held in $1,000 bail by United States Commissioner Shields yesterday on a charge of having robbed the mail.

When arrested the aged man stoutly denied the charge, but when confronted with marks on five $1 bills placed in a test letter, and found practically in his possession, he broke down and confessed that he had taken that letter and "perhaps a few others."

Peterson had been in charge of Station H at night. He lives with his wife and five grown children at No. 410 South 4th avenue, Mount Vernon.

ADDRESS ON SOCIALISM.

Prof. Monaghan Entertains Large Audience in K. of C. Temple.

Immediately following short business session of Spalding Council, No. 417, Knights of Columbus, held at the K. of C. Temple, 606 E street northwest Thursday evening, Prof. J. C. Monaghan of the Department of Commerce and Labor delivered an address on "Socialism." The hall was thrown open to the public, and a large audience was in attendance. Mr. Monaghan said in part:

"The world has often wondered at the attitude of the people in Catholic countries toward the monks and monasteries. Why, it is asked, do the people so often and in so many places hold the monks in contempt? They have been kind to the people in the past. They educated the masses, made it possible for them to achieve prosperity and some progress. Why, then, do the people detest these the best and most generous, seemingly, of their benefactors. The cause is easily found. The monks became masters of the land. They doled out as a charity, or in place of kindness, what the people wanted a chance to earn for themselves. The people wanted the lands owned by the monks."

"We have the same question today. The people do not want charity; they want a chance to work for themselves. And, mark me, a people that pushes up the ladder for itself and by itself is better built, sturdier and stronger than one that has to be bolstered up by others."

"The world in which we live is a discontented one. Take Russia's discontent—it is nihilism. Over the borders in the German empire we find socialism, a considerable advance on nihilism. In England we get the labor question in place of socialism. In this country we have what England has, the labor question—plus a tendency to socialism."

Continuing, Prof. Monaghan quoted: "By their fruits ye shall know them," and explained his purpose to talk not entirely of socialism, but of a few of its leaders. He proceeded to give a minute history of them and of the work they had accomplished. His arraignment of Maxim Gorky, "The Zola of the Slavs," who recently arrived in this country, was most pronounced.
