Washington Gaslight Co. To Get More Strength From Your Food.

WHEN the bowels are filled with undigested food we may be a great deal worse off than if we were half starved.

Because food that stays too long in the bowels decays there.

Just as if it stayed too long in the open air.

Well, when food decays in the bowels, through delayed and overdue action, what happens?

The millions of little Suction Pumps that line the bowels and intestines then draw Poison from the decayed food, instead of the Nourishment they were intended to draw.

This Poison gets into the blood, and, in time, spreads all over the body, unless the cause of Constipation is promptly removed.

That cause of Constipation is Weak or Lazy Bowel Muscles.

When your Bowel Muscles grow flabby they need Exercise to strengthen them, not "Physic" to pamper them.

There's only one kind of Artificial Exercise for the Bowel Muscles.

Its name is "CASCARETS," and its price is Ten Cents a box.

So, if you want the same natural action that a six-mile walk in the country would give you (without the weariness) take one "Cascareset" at a time, with intervals between, till you reach the exact condition you desire.

One Cascareset at a time will properly cleanse a foal Breath or Coated Tongue.

Don't fail to carry the Vest Pocket Cascareset Box with you constantly.

All Druggists sell them—over ten million boxes a year.

Be very careful to get the genuine, made only by the Suezling Remedy Company and never sold in bulk. Every tablet stamped "CCC." 741

PEONAGE CASE ARGUMENT Abtest Heard by the Bench in Many Years.

RECOVERY OF SENATOR DEPEW Extenuating Circumstances Regarding Him Painted by Friends—Police of London.

BY WILLIAM E. CURTIS. Written for The Star and the Chicago Record-Herald.

Although the newspapers are making much of the point that Attorney General Moody should not sit in judgment upon causes in which he has been engaged as an attorney, and such causes are numerous and will occupy much of the attention of the Supreme Court for several years, the justices commend his appointment very cordially. They say that he is not only well qualified to occupy a seat upon the bench, but they know of no reason why he should not do so. Speaking of his ability, and of the justices asserted the other day that the ablest argument heard by the court for many years was made last winter by Mr. Moody in what are known as the "peonage case." That is a very high compliment coming from a court before which the ablest jurists of the United States are constantly appearing.

Mr. Moody took great personal as well as official and professional interest in the case referred to, as it involved a human matter which had attracted the attention of his employees who happen to be held in his plantation owners and others deliberately devised means by which their hands shall become the property of the State. Samuel M. Clay, a turpentine manufacturer, was convicted of the crime of this form of peonage—of unlawfully and forcibly holding one or two of his employees to labor for him—and was sentenced to the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta for four years. His case was appealed to the Supreme Court of the United States.

The facts were that the two negroes, named Gordon and Ridley, left Clay's turpentine camp in Georgia, and were followed by Clay through the Georgia boundary into the state of Florida with handcuffs and bogus warrants and arrested them at the house of a man named Dean. The latter offered to pay Clay the debt which the latter claimed was due him from Gordon and Ridley, and Clay, for $100.00 and $9 for the other, but Clay refused, saying that he wanted to carry them back to Georgia and make an example of them. The negroes denied owing him anything, but Clay insisted, showed his bogus warrants and carried them away handcuffed.

Attorney General Moody made a profound impression upon the court by his arguments.

Change in Legal Style.

There has been a great change in the style of oratory and also in the literary style of opinions that are rendered by the court, just as there has been in literature. If Addison should send one of his articles from the Spectator to the best of our modern orators or today would he be rejected. It would be as much out of date as the coat, the waistcoat or the breeches he wore when he wrote it, for fashions in oratory and literature change just as they do in millinery and raiment. If you will compare an opinion of the late Justice Fuller, or of Chief Justice Harlan with those pronounced by their predecessors you will be surprised at the difference in the method of treating questions and in verbiage. The judicial decisions of today are more concise, and the facts are stated in a more direct way. No more circumlocution; they go direct to the heart of the proposition and dissect it as a surgeon does his patient. The same is true with arguments before the court. Many judges will not listen to outbursts of eloquence that used to be so common in the days of Chief Justice Marshall. In court is no longer a dramatic performance, and if an attorney loses control of himself and tries to make a display of eloquence the judge is pretty certain to call him down and admonish him to "confine his remarks to the dog's tail."

The Court, who could not be admitted and is most effective in a court today is that which covers as concisely as possible all the facts and all the law, and the justices will tell you that at every term of court they hear arguments that would have been considered extraordinary if they had been delivered a century ago. I heard one of the justices say not long ago that he knew of forty lawyers at the bar of the Supreme Court who could make a strong argument than Daniel Webster, although he doubted if any of them could produce the monumental impression that Webster's did.

There has been considerable simplification in the preparation of legal documents. The contracts, wills and similar documents are much shorter and simpler than they used to be. The entire drift is toward simplicity, brevity and directness of statement.

Lawyers' Itemized Bills.

It is becoming a custom also for lawyers to present itemized bills to their clients. Until recently it was not considered professional by many attorneys to itemize a bill. An account would be rendered every three or every six months, and the professional bill would be a lump sum, and the client might not permit any inquiry as to what those services were. Today, however, the custom is changing, and the largest practice are submitting statements in detail, showing exactly what they have done for their clients and how they have done it, and the money they demand. This has always been the custom in England. Over there a solicitor renders account quarterly to his regular clients and sets down in detail every item of expenditure and every service performed down to the cost of the stationery and the time required to prepare the bill.

A few weeks ago in London the late J. W. St. Clair of West Virginia, who died only last week, showed me the itemized bill he had received from a London solicitor whom he had employed to assist him in a search for a long time. It was very long and minute. It showed how many visits the solicitor had made to Mr. St. Clair and how many visits Mr. St. Clair had made to the solicitor. Every letter the solicitor had written, every paper he had drawn, every inquiry he had made, every precedent he had hunted up, and the solicitor was charged for according to the time occupied, and whenever he sent the messenger in his hand to the solicitor, and in the case, even if it were to post a letter, he charged a shilling or sixpence. Every postage stamp was accounted for; the time for the stenographer and typewriter who received his dictation and copied the documents, and here and there in the bill were charges of a tuppence or a threepence or a sixpence for stationery.

This account was copied in the books of the solicitor, and the bill, which has always prevailed in England, and as the firm is an old one, Mr. St. Clair told me that they could account for every shilling it had received from a client for two centuries.

This dear old couple are vigorous and active both in body and mind, thanks to Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey.

We both give praise to the best of all medicines. It does me more good for bronchial trouble than anything I ever tried. We are getting along nicely." Mrs. R. M. SUN IN ITS NEW HOME

UP-TO-DATE NEWSPAPER BUILDING FOR BALTIMORE.

In what is regarded as one of the handsomest and best equipped newspaper offices in the world the Baltimore Sun now makes its home. The new building, possession of which was taken yesterday, was planned after the Sun iron building, Baltimore and South streets, destroyed in the great conflagration of February 9, 1904, and is located at the corner of Baltimore and Charles streets, in the heart of the business section of the city. Its construction was commenced soon after the fire and yesterday morning, November 17, the paper was issued for the first time from the structure.

The new Sun building is four stories in height and is used exclusively by the newspaper company. It fronts a little more than 52 feet on Baltimore and German streets and 201 feet on Charles street, each floor having an area of about 10,000 square feet. The basement is used for the presses, which rest on a solid foundation. On the first or ground floor are located the business and circulation departments, the editorial department, the third floor of the composing room, have been provided. The second floor is given up to the use of the editorial department, the third floor of the composing room, have been provided.

Did Not Miss an Issue.

The burning of the old building, the occupation of temporary quarters and the moving from those quarters to the new building caused much inconvenience, yet the Sun was issued daily without a single omission.

The new Sun building naturally attracts the eye. A row of gigantic pillars, mounted with Ionic capitals are features of three sides. Next to the top of the building, above the entrance on Charles and Baltimore streets, are two huge clocks with a circumference of more than twenty-five feet each. The entrances admit to a large airy room, 180 feet, finished in marble, bronze and mahogany. The counter is semicircular. In rear of it are the offices of the bookkeepers, circulation manager and his assistants. Pneumatic tubes, by means of which the business office is in touch with the editorial and composing rooms, have been provided.

The second floor embraces spacious quarters to the officers of the A. S. Abell Company, the editors of the Sun and the staff of reporters.

Equipment of Composing Room.

The composing room, which occupies the entire third floor, is equipped with 24 typesetting machines, the best pattern. At the copy-cutting desk are pneumatic tubes. A repair shop with extra parts for machines and necessary tools is a feature.

In the basement are the combinations of cylinders, cogwheels, rollers, etc. known as newspaper presses. Each of the four presses is of the quadruple type with a capacity of 24,000 twelve, fourteen or sixteen page papers an hour, or a total capacity of 96,000 per hour. The roll paper which is fed in at one end of the press and which comes out at the other end and the electricity that powers the press are pneumatic tubes. It is generated in the building. Should any accident occur to the generating machinery, however, connection could be made with the city's electric power supply almost instantaneously.

Among the first to inspect the new building were Gov. Warfield, Judge Harlan and former Representative W. W. McIntyre.

Underground Long Distance.

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE STAR.

WILMINGTON, Del., November 17.—The Bell and Delaware and Atlantic Telephone companies, affiliated corporations, have planned a gigantic underground telephone system, whereby the entire service between New York and Washington is to be underground. All of the wires between Wilmington, Philadelphia and New York are now underground and surveyors are mapping out the proposed underground line between Wilmington and Washington.

It is expected that this will be built next year. It is understood that the company contemplates running its conduits in the tunnels under the North and East rivers.

RAW MILK DANGEROUS

For Children and Invalids.

Scarlet fever is unknown in countries where cow's milk is not used as food; hence milk from unsanitary stables may contain the poison causing it.

Milk is also known to have caused epidemics of

DIPHTHERIA, TYPHOID and other ENTERIC DISEASES.

A simple precaution consists in SCALDING MILK and boiling it well not affect its digestibility. After scalding keep cool and covered.

A regular diet for children on condensed milk is inadvisable.
