RAILROAD AFFAIRS

State Commission Renders Railway Decision.

SEVERAL CHANGES PROVIDED

Orders in Reference to the Amount of Cash Fares.

AS TO DEMOCRATIC PRIMARY

Memorial Services by Councils of Junior Order of United Americans.

Other Matters.

Special Correspondence of The Star.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., May 25, 1907.

The state corporation commission has rendered a decision in the case of the Washington, Arlington and Falls Church Railway Company, which was argued at the Alexandria county court house February 15 and 16 last. One important change provided by the decision is a reduction in cash fares. It is also provided that the company must either furnish a station where passengers may purchase tickets or place them in the hands of its employees for sale.

The commission makes the following findings:

"The commission is of the opinion that the net earnings of the defendant railway company from all the lines operated by it, derived by deducting all operating expenses and taxes from the gross passenger revenue, constitute an exceedingly profitable return upon the capital invested in the property of the corporation, and that the travel upon and the earnings of the road will steadily increase with reasonable fares and proper management.

"That the present system of passenger fares in effect on the defendant railway company lines is complicated and confusing to the passenger, and that the traffic of the road very largely is regular in character and deprives the road of some revenue which it would otherwise acquire from occasional excursion travel.

"It appearing in the evidence that the defendant company is constructing a connecting line by which its lines in Alexandria and Fairfax counties will be connected with the tracks of the Washington, Alexandria and Mount Vernon Electric Railway Company, thereby giving its patrons through travel over the tracks of the latter company, into the lower part of the city of Washington, instead of handling its passengers as now done at Rosslyn, the southern end of the Aqueduct bridge over the Potomac river, the commission orders that as soon as the said connecting line is completed and put into operation the defendant railway company shall, after rearranging its passenger rates in accordance with this order, print in convenient form all its various fares for public distribution.

Amount of Fares.

"It is ordered that from and after the first day of June, 1907, the defendant railway company shall not charge, whether collected in cash or upon sale of tickets, a greater amount than 5 cents for each passenger for travel between Rosslyn or Aqueduct bridge and Clarendon or intermediate points, and not more than 6 cents, whether collected in cash or upon sale of tickets, for each passenger between Rosslyn or Aqueduct bridge and Fort Myer and not more than 7 cents, whether collected in cash or upon sale of tickets, for any stopping place between Fort Myer and Nauck. It is further ordered that from and after the first day of June, 1907, the defendant railway company shall not charge, whether collected in cash or upon the sale of tickets, a greater amount than 5 cents for each passenger between Rosslyn or Aqueduct bridge and Fort Myer, or intermediate stations; and not more than 10 cents for each passenger for travel between Vetch and West End or intermediate points.

"It is further ordered that the general regulation, as to cash fares to be observed by the defendant railway company from and after June 1, 1907. A passenger boarding a car at any stopping place at which tickets are not sold, or at which for any reason he cannot purchase a ticket, shall not be charged more, as cash fare collected on the car, than the straight ticket fare, according to the present passenger tariff of the road, as modified by this order, obtaining at the nearest ticket-selling station in either direction, a charge of 5 cents to be made if such passenger debarks before a ticket station is reached; and in no event shall the defendant railway company collect, whether in cash or by sale of ticket, from any passenger before in excess of 5 cents for a trip between any two stations or any part of its road; nor shall it collect in cash or by sale of ticket from any passenger between any two stations or any part of its road at which tickets are not sold, and which are less than three miles apart, a sum greater than 10 cents.

Must Submit List.

"This commission cannot undertake to revise the whole system of passenger fares of the defendant railway company at this time, but the commission now orders that before the connecting line above mentioned is put into operation the defendant company shall, subject to the regulations herein contained, submit to the commission all of its passenger fares of every character, arranged in orderly and systematic manner or publication, so that the commission may examine them before they are put into effect and published.

"It is further ordered that all of the special rates and tickets now used, and in effect upon the road of the defendant railway company, such as commutation tickets, excursion tickets, and tickets for mother and child, and tickets for the use of book tickets, may be continued in force by the defendant railway company, the fares and charges evidenced by the various said special rates and tickets not to be in excess of those now in effect, and no advance to be made therein without the consent of the commission, first to be given by a statement showing the schedule it proposes to put into effect when the connecting line is put into operation, such statement to be accompanied by a further statement showing the number and character of cars then to be in use upon the road, and the several portions of the road upon which the various cars are to be operated.

"It is ordered that these proceedings be kept upon the docket of the commission so that further orders may be entered herein and further requirements made should additional action of the commission be necessary in order that just and reasonable fares may be given to the public, and proper say and consent be given to the public and defendant railway company.

Democratic Primary.

Details incidental to the democratic primary, which will be held June 19 next for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Congress from the eighth district, will be completed next week when a called meeting of the committee will be held. City Chairman Bendheim stated tonight that he had not decided upon the date. It is expected that the committee will name two members to fill vacancies in the second and third wards. The appointment of judges and clerks will also be made at the meeting. Alexandria and Belle Haven councils, Junior Order of United American Mechanics will hold special memorial services at 3:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the Methodist Protestant church. The principal speaker will be Rev. G. I. Humphreys, pastor of the Methodist Protestant Church, Rev. Edgar Carpenter, rector of Grace Protestant Episcopal Church, will also participate in the exercises. In the event the weather is unfavorable the services will occur in St. Peter's Hall.

It is understood that employees of the Washington, Alexandria and Mount Vernon electric railway have organized a movement to organize a union for mutual protection.

Brief Mention.

Mrs. Emma T. Roche has sold to Mrs. Mary L. Roche of this city several lots on South Alfred street between Prince and Duke streets. The purchaser will, it is understood, improve the ground by the erection of modern dwellings thereon.

In the corporation court today a decree for sale was entered in the case of E. Stuart Smith against Charles G. Smith, Mr. Arthur A. Paul departed today for Harrisburg, Pa., to attend the convention of the Protestant Knights Templar.

Arrangements have been made for Rev. R. K. Massey of the Episcopal Theological Seminary to deliver a lecture before the Y. M. C. A. of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute at Blacksburg, Va., June 2.

A LIAR, SAID THE COURT

SHARP LANGUAGE TO ALLEGED SOUTHERN GENTLEMAN.

Special Dispatch to The Star.

NEW YORK, May 25.—Henry Roscoe Brown, whose mother, Mrs. S. E. Brown, lives at 1004 Pennsylvania avenue, Baltimore, is the young man who, under the name of James Brown, was arraigned as a pickpocket and vagrant with Whitey Ryan, ex-convict and bad man, last Wednesday morning, in the Tombs police court, before Magistrate Crane. At that time he was about to be sentenced to six months in the workhouse when he told the court he was not a criminal at all, but a Baltimore lawyer, and that he was in New York on a secret mission, which necessitated his association with criminals. He said he represented large interests, and it was only his fear that getting himself locked up with his principals had made him disclose his identity. He admitted having been in New York since last summer, and that central office men had picked him up in the company of criminals several times since his arrival.

Magistrate Crane did not put much stock in his story, but consented to give him until this morning to produce proofs. He did so as to his identity, but his mother did not back on the "secret mission for big interests" feature of his tale. When his case was called a pretty little woman, who said she was his wife, went quietly forward and took a front seat.

Brown was very aggressive. He pushed the newspaper reporters off the bridge, declaring they must not listen to his explanation, and grabbed the papers from them. He subsided only when Sergt. Hunt reminded him that whatever he was in Baltimore, he was in the Tombs court as a defendant found in the company of a thief.

Ordered to Shut Up.

"And I want you to shut right up," said the sergeant, "or I'll send you down where you belong."

Lawyer William H. Weissager, a former member of the city council of Baltimore, but now practicing in this city, and Thos. C. Sullivan appeared for Brown.

They told the magistrate that Brown was a nephew of ex-Governor Brown, boss of the democratic party in Maryland, an honor man of the class of 1903, University of Maryland, and a member of the bar of Baltimore. His certificate of admission to the bar, dated September 6, 1904, the university year book showing his picture with his class, and other documents were handed up by Lawyer Weissager.

Magistrate Crane said he would release Brown if his lawyers would guarantee his immediate return to Baltimore. Finally, the young woman, who appeared as Mrs. Brown, was called in. She agreed to get railroad tickets at once and pay her travel expenses, the magistrate questioned.

"Is that woman your wife?" he said.

"Yes, as to me," said Brown glibly.

"When were you married?"

"About a year ago."

"When and where?"

Slam From the Judge.

Brown blushed, and stammered that he did not want to say.

"I've been disgraced enough without dragging others into it," he said.

"And you say you are a gentleman?"

"Yes, sir; I am a southern gentleman," said Brown, trying to stand up straight and appear like one.

"Was it at the first place you are a liar," said the court. "That puts you far from your claim. This woman is not your wife, and you have all of the usual thief's nerve in trying to deceive this court. Your fingers are yellow from cigarettes, and your heart is as yellow as your fingers."

"I sympathize with you, mother, but have one for you, a liar and by your own choice a companion of the lowest thieves in this city."

The magistrate ordered Lieut. Frazee to put Brown and his wife on a train for Baltimore, and to bring both back if they refused to go, or if either was ever seen in New York again.

How our aching hearts despair!

"Round its little grave we linger,
Till the setting sun is low,
To a letter that we have treasured
With the Rose" we cherished so.

Wasn't she a precious one,
There will be a glorious dawn;
In heaven your joys and blessings
Will be remembered.
