forming good habits, and to start them safely upon their careers as wage earners and citizens. Most of these boys, who are now enjoying the advantages of the home are employed in the shops and department stores of Washington on the wages of $3 a week and less. They are bright, earnest, intelligent, ambitious youngsters, full of mischief and mirth, and any one who is fond of children will enjoy an evening at the home, hearing them sing and watching them in their games. Other of the boys are sons of widows who are out at work and cannot look after them. The boys who are not employed during the day attend a public school in the neighborhood, but all are required to do a certain amount of work about the house. They are taught valuable lessons in helpfulness. They take care of their rooms, they set the tables, wash the dishes, look after the furnace, stow away the coal and the wood, and are taught orderliness, punctuality, neatness and other virtues by precept and example.

Invited to Guatemala.
The Secretary of State has received from the President of Guatemala an invitation to the United States to send a representative to participate in the grand ceremonies that have been arranged to celebrate the opening of railway communication across that republic between the two oceans. I told you the other day about the history of this railroad and its importance. The officials and the people of Guatemala appreciate thoroughly the possibilities it opens for the extension of their commerce and the development of their resources, and the inauguration of traffic will be an occasion of popular rejoicing. The first train will leave Puerto Barrios, the terminus on the Caribbean sea, for the capital, Guatemala City, on January 15, and the festivities will continue until the 26th of this month. They will include banquets, balls, excursions, and all other kinds of entertainment; and mass meetings at various points along the road will be addressed by the President and other public men. There will be delegations from Mexico and the other Central American countries, as well as from the United States. Secretary Root is taking great interest in the matter, because he recognizes the great importance of the new railroad and its future bearing upon the development of our relations with Central America.

Avalanche of Bills in Congress.
The list of bills and resolutions introduced in the Senate and House of Representatives during the first three weeks of the session makes a quarto volume, two columns to the page, of 377 pages. In the Senate 2,981 bills have been introduced, and eighteen joint resolutions. In the House 11,000 bills have been introduced, and eighty-one resolutions. The list merely gives the number, the title, and the name of the man who introduced it and the name of the committee to which the bill is referred, and yet the volume weighs several pounds, and is almost as big as one of the bound census reports, or the volumes of the Century Dictionary. The bills are arranged by numbers, but so many members have introduced such quantities that some of the individual bills cover entire pages. It would be interesting to know how many of them are duplicates of those that have been introduced at previous sessions and are already on the statute books. It is a common practice for a member of the House to obtain from the files of the document room copies of all the bills that he introduced at the previous session, and copies of bills that were introduced by other members that hit his fancy, and drop them in the box without investigating their history. At least 95 per cent of all the 14,081 bills have been introduced before, some of them in several Congresses, and they are lying in stacks in the pigeon-holes of the various committees. But the law requires a bill to be reintroduced at the beginning of every Congress and thus increases the annual expenditure for printing. The largest number propose additional pensions to old soldiers and their surviving widows. The general pension laws limit the allowances, and the only way to get an increase is to appeal to Congress, where provision may be made in a special bill. Thousands of these bills are passed at every session, and the merits of the claimants are not always considered.

Enterprises of Benevolent Men and Women.

NEW HOTEL IN NEW YORK
No Girl Admitted Earning Over $12 a Week.

EFFORTS OF LOCAL PEOPLE
Opening the Guatemalan Railway. Over 14,000 Bills Already Introduced in Present Congress.

BY WILLIAM E. CURTIS.
Written for The Star and the Chicago Record-Herald.

There was recently opened in 102d street, New York, a six-story lodging and boarding house intended exclusively for working girls. It has fifty-six beds and is capable of accommodating one hundred girls, who will be required to pay only $2.50, $3, $3.50 and $3.75 per week for board and room, according to location, and 50 cents a week extra for their laundry. No girl earning more than $12 a week or over thirty years of age will be admitted. There is a common sitting room and reading room, with newspapers, magazines and books, and a common sewing room with sewing machines and all the appurtenances of a dress-making establishment, in which the girls may make their own garments, trim their own hats, do their mending and assist each other in similar feminine necessities. The hotel has been erected by and will be under the management of Rev. H. M. Tindall, pastor of an interdenominational church in the same neighborhood known as the People's Tabernacle, and it is intended to furnish a comfortable and attractive home for clean and nourishing food, and for the thousands of homeless girls who are working for small wages in the city of New York.

There have been several experiments of this kind to furnish accommodations of various grades for working women, but this is the first institution which has been able to offer so much for so little to a class that requires more care and needs a home more than any other. It is a mystery how young women are able to support themselves in a city like New York, where their wages are so low, where distances are so great and where the cost of living is less, the distances are not so great, the temptations are comparatively few, and the accommodations are much more healthful, agreeable and economical. There are several homes managed by church societies, both Catholic and Protestant, where young women can obtain board and lodging at cost and where they are protected from the temptations that women of their class are exposed to everywhere, although they are by no means so great in Washington as in other larger cities. The homes of nearly all of the working girls of Washington belong in the city and live with their parents. The floating population of this class is small, and it is only in any other city of its size, because Washington is not a commercial or a manufacturing town, and there is little here to draw girls from other cities. The demand for their class of labor is supplied by the resident families.

The Young Women's Christian Association has a home for the young women of 13th street near N street northwest; a society of benevolent women have a similar institution called the Young Women's Christian Home, at 11 S street northwest, of which Mr. George W. White, cashier of the Commercial National Bank, is the treasurer. The Catholic women of this city maintain a home for young women at North Carolina avenue southeast, and there are several other places where homeless girls are trying to earn their living in a kindly care.

The same conditions prevail concerning working boys. No other city of the same size is so free from the evils of child labor as Washington. There is very little demand here for the services of young boys, either in mercantile or manufacturing establishments, and the only supply is from the families of the city. Nevertheless, a certain number always have to be taken care of by benevolence. Most of them are new children, and their parents are unable to provide for them; widows who are compelled to support themselves and younger children and cannot earn enough to provide for most of their children are incapacitated by one cause or another, and cannot furnish the parental care and support that their children need. Matrons, seamstresses, maids, waitresses, cooks and other serving women in hotels, boarding houses and private homes of Washington are widows who are not enjoying the advantages of the home, and who, in many cases, have no relatives or friends with whom the children can be placed. Sometimes they are able to provide clothing and even to pay for board in a private family, but it is difficult for a mother whose occupation demands her constant attention to watch over her children, even if she is able to board and clothe them.

The Maudsley Home.
It is gratifying to know that there is a home in this city where the young sons of women in such situations are taken care of, where they can have comfortable beds, nourishing food, wholesome surroundings, and the diversions and amusements that childhood demands. It is called the Working Boys' Home, and it occupies the premises at 13th and C street northwest, which was a legacy from the late Mrs. George Maudsley. It accommodates forty boarders and is supported entirely by the contributions of citizens of Washington who have a kindly spirit for boys. Mrs. C. M. Foulke, 2011 Massachusetts avenue northwest, is president of the board of managers, and William Kerr, 2013 Q street northwest, is vice president; Mrs. L. N. Prindle, the Ontario, is secretary. The Maudsley Children of Chevy Chase, Md., is the treasurer. It costs about $6,000 to support forty boys in this home for one year, and the sums of $400 will pay all the expenses of forty boys for a month, and $16 will pay all their expenses for a day. During the summer the boys spend their vacations in a camp on the river, and are housed on the Pierce Mill road, near the laboratories of the bureau of standards, and those who do not have to work are kept earning money for three months sleeping on iron cots and in hammocks and having a beautiful time. During the winter months they have the use of a gymnasium under the supervision of a competent teacher; they have a library and an amusement room, with all kinds of games, and every Thursday evening they are entertained by volunteers who come in to talk to them, to tell them stories, to sing with them and to amuse them in other ways. In addition to the forty boarders about forty other working boys from outside are given the use of the gymnasium, reading room and amusement room, and they are kept from the temptations of the streets.

Object of the Institution.
The chief object of the institution is to furnish a home with neat and comfortable lodgings, wholesome food, and instructive diversions and Christian influences for working boys whose small earnings will not pay the expenses of the degrading influences of cheap lodgings, houses and the vicious associations of street life; to surround them with the influences of home; to assist them in
