

THE EVENING STAR.

With Sunday Morning Edition.

WASHINGTON, SATURDAY, August 20, 1910

THEODORE W. NOYES, Editor

The Evening Star Newspaper Company. Office: 11th St. and Pennsylvania Avenue, N. W.

Published by Theodore W. Noyes, at the office of the Evening Star Newspaper Company, 11th St. and Pennsylvania Avenue, N. W., Washington, D. C.

Entered as second-class matter at the post office at Washington, D. C.

Looking at the political situation today the American observer, not swayed by partisan or factional spirit, may well observe, with Stephen Blackpool, "It's all a muddle!"

A Muddle. Looking at the political situation today the American observer, not swayed by partisan or factional spirit, may well observe, with Stephen Blackpool, "It's all a muddle!"

Japan and Korea. Arrangements are in the final stages, it is announced, for the annexation of Korea by Japan, an event for which the world has been thoroughly prepared for several years.

The Face on the Stamp. George Washington, whose face serene upon the postage stamp is seen, might sometimes lose his look of pride if he knew what was mailed inside.

How It Looked. "Why don't you eat your caviar?" asked the host.

Electioneering. "Hiram," exclaimed Mrs. Corntossel, "that candidate you don't like is coming up the road."

Self-Sacrifice. There was a philosopher, long, long ago, who felt his duty to the public to show just how it should manage its various cares.

The Spider and the Fly. What a change has come over the world since the time when children used to be taught to walk into the spider's web.

Men Who Deserve Pensions. When the records of the summer work of the members of the life-saving crews on the seacoast are read it is a record of heroism.

Lights on All Vehicles. Of the power of the Commission to require that all horse-drawn vehicles shall display lights after dark there can be no question.

There is no hope that Mr. Bristow and Mr. Aldrich will ever come to any agreement as to the ethics of the rubber business.

Sometimes a king has as much difficulty in getting his utterances into shape for popular approval as a poet laureate.

Bryan, Watterson and Harmon. Mr. Bryan and Mr. Watterson are exchanging a few remarks on the subject of party regularity and the next democratic presidential nomination.

Mr. Watterson thinks Mr. Bryan can afford to forget, or at least forgive, the division of 1896, and lend his influence toward nominating a new party.

Mr. Watterson thinks Mr. Bryan can afford to forget, or at least forgive, the division of 1896, and lend his influence toward nominating a new party.

no names, but it is known of all that he was of the number.

Mr. Bryan, in his reply, while diplomatic, suggests things indicating that with him the past is not dead.

It may not be assumed that Mr. Watterson in his observation of Mr. Bryan in his reply had Gov. Harmon in view.

In front. A driver approaching another horse-drawn vehicle or a motor car will have little trouble in avoiding an encounter.

Even if that cultured diplomat Wu Ting-fang does not live to be two hundred years old, he may acquire the equivalent of several centuries in experience.

Postmaster General Hitchcock is one of the men who are active in affairs who never resort to the resignation rumor as a means of reaching the spotlight.

There seems some difference of impression as to whether Mr. Murray Crane went out to collect news or to break it.

Any candid person will admit that Esperanto must be a great deal easier than it looks.

SHOOTING STARS. BY PHILANDER JOHNSON.

The Unappreciated Raconteur. "Do you mean to say you don't consider Bilgins a man of his word?"

Mental Conflict. "What has become of all your enthusiasm about spelling reform?"
