MADE IN LINCOLN HALL AT NAVY YARD GATE

Marine Veteran Who Had This Distinction Is Dead in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, December 27.—The old guard lost another member yesterday. Reuben Macartney, 62 years old, in the United States Marine Corps from 1861 to 1865, and for many years an employee of the Philadelphia mint, was buried yesterday with due honors from those of his old comrades who remain. The funeral was from his late home, 2436 Stewart street. He was sixty-nine years old.

Macartney knew Rear Admiral Melville, who is retired now, when the admiral was chief engineer of the U. S. S. Wachusett, assigned to coast service to catch block-runners, and they were close friends. He enlisted July 13, 1861, at the age of twenty, and eight days later, July 21, fought in the first big battle of the war, Bull Run.

Other battles in which Macartney took part, were on land and some on sea, were Hatteras, Port Royal, Fort Buford and Fort Beauregard, Sumter, Craig and Pulaski. While on the Wachusett he served under Capt. Napoleon Collins, when Admiral Melville handled her engines. July 14, 1864, Macartney was honorably discharged.

He was a Philadelphian, being born in the southern part of the city. In 1889 he was appointed to a position in the Philadelphia mint, which he continued to hold, save in Cleveland's administration, and later, for a time, when he went into business. When the new mint was turned over to the government, Macartney had the honor of raising the first American flag over it.

Halted Abraham Lincoln.

The veteran liked to tell a story about an encounter with President Lincoln while he was stationed at the Washington navy yard. Strict orders had been given to Macartney, who was on guard at the Anacostia bridge, to permit no one to cross the bridge without proper credentials. When Lincoln came along Macartney stopped him.

"Got to have a passport to come in here," he explained. The President, who was wearing his famous top hat, didn't expostulate. He sent for a passport and waited until the clerk had issued it. Macartney stepped back and saluted when he was handed the paper, instructing him to "Pass the President of the United States." He said he knew it was "Old Abe," but his orders were strict.

DEATH OF MRS. KELLEY.

Widow of First Union Officer Wounded in Civil War.

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary Bruce Kelley, who died Saturday evening, will be held at St. Margaret's Protestant Episcopal Church tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Mrs. Kelley was the widow of Gen. Benjamin F. Kelley, the first Union officer wounded in the civil war, at the battle of Phillipi, West Virginia, and for many years made her home in Washington during the winter season, occupying an apartment at the Dresden and being actively identified with the social and literary life of the city. She was a native of Cumberland, Md., where her father, Judge Bruce, was a member of the bar and bench of the Maryland courts.

Her last illness was of less than a week's duration, slight cold developing into pneumonia, which terminated fatally Saturday evening. Her immediate relatives, a brother in Cumberland and a granddaughter in Philadelphia, were notified of her illness, and hastened to Washington, but her death occurred before their arrival. The interment will be at Arlington, beside the body of Gen. Kelley, who died about eighteen years ago.

MRS. EICHBERG MAY RECOVER.

The physicians think she will recover, although the acid she spilled on her face probably will leave her scarred for life. Gustav Eichberg, the woman's husband, reached this city this morning and saw her at the hospital.

SUBWAY IS SUGGESTED.

Plan for Relief of Traffic Congestions Proposed.

A subway to relieve some of the congested traffic conditions in the neighborhood of the Treasury Department, and extend to the Commodore Hotel, is suggested by the Commissioners of the city. Robert Harlow Love, 1424 W street northwest, Mr. Love outlines his subway plan as follows: "An underground station taking up all the space from curb to curb, or further, in the center of the city, from the south curb line of G street to the north curb line of Pennsylvania avenue and east and west on the latter streets as far as may be necessary; cars of the 14th and 15th street lines and the following line to dip underground at the avenue line; on 14th street just south of the avenue line, the subway line will rise slightly approaching H street on Pennsylvania avenue at 17th street, the G street line to swing around into the tunnel also at that point, both lines to come to the surface again where the track swings into Pennsylvania avenue at the south end of the Treasury."
