TRAGEDY BY SWORD

Mexico-Must Be Prepared for It, Madero Says.

HE HAS CHANGED HIS TUNE

Speech He Makes Sets Auditors Thinking He Is Preparing Role for Himself.

MEXICO CITY, October 5, 1912. The Mexican people must be prepared to be governed by a dictator "who will rule by the sword" if they fail to support the present administration, according to President Madero.

The statement was made in a speech at a banquet at which the guests were congressmen and politicians in private life. The banqueters retired with only an indistinct idea of just what it was the president had meant, and since then the public generally has done much guessing as to his real meaning.

When Madero was spreading the doctrine of equality and democracy there were few who would have believed there was the making of a despotic dictator in him. Since then, however, by the invocation of the law of suspension of constitutional guarantees he has displayed some of the signs of a successful "iron man." Many have suggested that President Madero was warning them that he himself would be the one to "rule by the sword."

"To Call a Dictator." "Long ago," said the president, "when I first began to work, I decided that the will of the people is the will of God. This will must be respected, and I consider it my duty to see that it is. The present government has fulfilled its promise, and if the government freely elected by the people should be established, it would be proof that the Mexican people are incapable of democracy. It would then be necessary to call a dictator who will govern by two methods."

The president also bitterly assailed the press, an institution for whose untrammeled liberty he has always been a champion. "The press which has survived," said the president, "is in its majority a relic of the past. It tries to alienate the people, but the people, but it tried to do so for thirty years and still the people revolted, and they will refuse to believe it now."

CHAMPION OF THE POOR

Invades Grand Palais

M. Cochon, Parisian, Lodges Homeless Family in Apartments of Unique Grandeur.

Special Telegram to The Star. PARIS, October 12.—M. Cochon, the irrepresible champion of the poor and of large homeless families, has indulged in another freak, that of lodging a family of seven children, the father, mother and seven children, in the Grand Palais. He had tried the Hotel de Ville, the Louvre, the Tuileries, and almost every public office and building from the ministry of the interior to the chamber of deputies, in which he had attempted to lodge one family after another. The Grand Palais had not yet been tried by him. He promptly selected it for his last family of proteges.

An Appeal for Help.

A carpenter with his wife and seven children had found shelter for a while with a charitable citizen of Courbevoie, but they were evicted at last by the owner and appealed to M. Cochon for help. Accordingly, visitors to the exhibition of workmen's dwellings at the Grand Palais, on the 10th of October, were agreeably surprised when in the afternoon they saw one of the cottages occupied by a real workman's family with a whole crew of children, and perceived an appetizing odor of pot-au-feu soup coming from the kitchen.

The mother set to work to make a fire in the kitchen, and the pot boiled. Smoke issued from the cottage chimney for the first time, and when visitors had gathered around, what was happening they looked at M. Cochon, and sent for meat, vegetables and fruit.

CHILDREN DELIGHTED.

Toward evening the whole family sat down to a hearty meal. The children looked round with admiration. Never before had they played in such a pretty garden, and the walls of the rooms were brilliantly varnished in white. The dining room was furnished with Dutch oak, and the bedrooms in birch wood. But when evening came the police commissaire, who had all day long shut his eyes to the matter, was obliged to intervene. He could not allow the family to spend the night in the Grand Palais. The carpenter was gently but firmly asked to remove his family to other quarters. He said with M. Cochon's approval, as all that the latter had desired was to call attention to the large and homeless families.

FRENCH YOUTH KILLS WOMAN HE SOUGHT TO WED, THEN ATTEMPTS SUICIDE.

Special Telegram to The Star.

PARIS, October 12.—Marcel Pischer, a clerk of twenty-one, had fallen desperately in love with Mme. Proux, a widow some ten years his senior, employed in the same office, on the Boulevard de l'Hopital. Pischer was of a reserved nature, but his morose disposition had been deepened by the death of his mother a year before. His whole life centered in his passion for the widow. Knowing his character, Mme. Proux was afraid to tell him the truth, namely, that she was to be married in October to another man. When Pischer implored her to marry him she would answer: "Wait till you've done your military service and then we'll see." For she hoped that out of eight would be out of mind.

Unfortunately, Pischer learned the truth from some source or other. More than once he used threats: "I will kill you," he said, "rather than see you being loved to another."

COMMITTS MURDER, ATTEMPTS SUICIDE.

Early in the morning, soon after the opening of the office, the few clients present saw a young man whose manner betrayed strong excitement enter the portion of the building reserved for employees. Soon afterward three shots rang out and the young man fell. A moment of confusion and then one of the employes ran to the door and locked it, thinking that once used threats: "I will kill you," he said, "rather than see you being loved to another."
