POPE'S POLAR EXPEDITION

Explorer Scott's Death Declared to Be Last Act.

SCIENTISTS TO WORK NOW

Discoveries Leave the Way Clear for Establishing a Chain of Circumpolar Observations.

PARIS, February 20, 1913.

Referring to the tragic end of Capt. Robert F. Scott on his recent voyage to the south pole, Mr. Schrader, the eminent French geographer, expresses the opinion that the death of the English explorer is the last act in the drama of the polar point obsession, which has caused the loss of so many lives.

The discoveries of Peary, Amundsen and Scott have at last removed the pessimistic desire of scientists to find the poles. Mr. Schrader declares, and leave the way clear for a considerable and important task, the results of which will be far reaching. This consists in establishing a chain of circumpolar observations, a vast system of scientific "monasteries," international in character.

The atmosphere and marine currents which circulate, winter and summer alike, round the pole perpetually melt water and ice. The cold waters descend toward the south, carrying quantities of ice, and are continually renewed from the Atlantic. Above these ice fields, floating toward the south, hovers a great extent of ice, which is broken up from the Atlantic. Above these ice fields, floating toward the south, hovers a great extent of ice, which is broken up from the Atlantic. U. S. EXAMINERS OF FRIEDMANN VACCINE ARE NAMED.

Health Service Attaches Are to Work With German Doctor.

FAIR TRIAL IS PROMISED

PARIS, February 20, 1913.

If Treatment Is Found Valuable Patients in New Mexico Then Will Be Aided.

Surgeon General Blue of the public health service today designated Director John F. Anderson of the hygiene laboratory and Surgeon Arthur M. Simson as a board to conduct an investigation of Dr. Friedmann's tuberculosis vaccine. The two public health officers leave for New York tonight to meet the German physician tomorrow. They will work with him to bring copies of the vaccine to the laboratory for tests and use upon monkeys.

"The government intends to give the Friedmann vaccine a thoroughly fair test," said Surgeon General Blue today. "If the first tests and the application to monkeys demonstrate it as of some value it will be tested further upon patients at the public health sanatorium at Fort Stanton, N. M."

"If it proves of value there it later will be available at all marine hospitals of the service. Sufferers should not raise their hopes too high until we have thoroughly investigated the vaccine."

Attitude of the United States.

The attitude of the United States government with regard to the Friedmann vaccine is explained in a letter sent to Dr. Friedmann in New York city by former Secretary MacVeach last Monday. The letter was made public by the United States public health service today, and is as follows:

"As you are already aware, the attention of this government has been directed to the vaccine of preparation for the cure of tuberculosis. Through official channels, the United States public health service has been kept informed of events in connection therewith, and a copy of your letter of January 12, 1913, has been received by the surgeon general at Berlin, was received by the surgeon general February 3.

"On account of the great importance of your announcement, and in view of your invitation, it was determined to send an officer of this service to New York to take advantage of your offer to make such investigations as would enable him to make a comprehensive and impartial report. On the same day, you were invited to make such investigations as would enable him to make a comprehensive and impartial report. ENGLAND ENACTS LAW PROHIBITING SPECIFIED AREAS.

Liberals United on Question—Premier Asquith Not Soon to Resign.

LONDON, March 1, 1913.

A popular pastime nowadays with continental aviators would seem to be flying over the English coast, and the pilots in Germany or France leave their moorings at dusk, speed over the channel, and then circle over the British cities and forts, flashing their lights to mystify and alarm the people below them. With the first indications of dawn the adventure comes to an end. The prowling birdman heads for home, houses his machine before the sun is well up, and leaves the officials of England to report his incursion to the war office in London.

Reports of these night visits became so general and vexatious at the same time so disconcerting, that the government finally took official action and passed a bill prohibiting the passage of aircraft over certain specified areas. Aircraft violating this regulation are treated as and otherwise warlike in character. The bill was introduced into the house of commons by Col. Seeley, secretary of war, and after a long and heated discussion, it was passed without dissent. It went to the lords the day before recess, and passed that house just as hurriedly.

Enforcement Is Question.

How the measure is to be enforced has aroused considerable interested speculation. The bill authorizes the proper officers to fire any infringing ship, and to use any and every other means to prevent infractions. The government is providing "sky guns" to replace the anti-aircraft guns, and it will also have the services of the naval aeroplanes and hydroplanes and the flying corps. The bill also provides for the purchase of about a dozen aeroplanes and three small airships.

Experts have very grave doubts whether the precautions will be sufficient to prevent the midnight visits. Col. Seeley, in introducing the bill, said it is not a direct attempt to force the government that were aimed at, but mischievous private persons, possibly from overseas, who are using the air as a means of espionage. There are combustible stores, to the great inconvenience of the people of the country.

What gave rise to the action of the government were reliable reports, in some cases from army aviators, that they were flying over Dover, Sheerness, Portsmouth and Liverpool, and on at least two occasions as far west as the Bristol Channel. How they had been paid in October, and they have continued up to the present time. At their last visit, they were seen to make light of them or to ascribe the moving lights and the noise of the propeller to the stars and the noise of the wind. Investigation showed that this could not be, and now the government proposes to come on privately owned foreign airships.

May Be From Germany.

Some people, however, discard this assumption and declare that at least one of the aircraft came from Borkum, the German fortress nearest the English coast. From Borkum it would be a very simple matter for a modern airship to cross the English coast, and it is claimed to have evidence that this night was made from Borkum to further and further investigations. How they had been paid in October, and they have continued up to the present time. At their last visit, they were seen to make light of them or to ascribe the moving lights and the noise of the propeller to the stars and the noise of the wind. Investigation showed that this could not be, and now the government proposes to come on privately owned foreign airships.

ALONG THE RIVER FRONT.

Low tides following the heavy northwesterly winds of Thursday and yesterday prevailing in the river, and on each low water since yesterday morning the river flats are exposed to view and vessels in the oyster docks and in other shoal docks about the harbor were left stranded for several hours. No damage, it is stated, was done by the boats by grounding in the docks, as the returning tides lifted the boats again and when they settled on the bottom it was as easy as going on the blocks in a dry dock. The gulls and other aquatic birds enjoyed a feast of the small fish left in the pools on the exposed flats and ate so much that they could hardly fly.

PARIS, March 1, 1913.

A curious story was told recently to the Paris police by a young Canadian, James Huntly of Winnipeg. Mr. Huntly is a station agent by profession. After a short stay in Paris he arrived, he said, at the Gare St. Lazare, in Paris, on his way to Nice. He intended to remain only one day here. He says that he put his baggage in the cloak room at the station, got a check for it and went for a stroll.

Harvard Is Hockey Champion.

Harvard has won the intercollegiate hockey championship of the year, in spite of the fact that the Crimson is not a member of the Intercollegiate Association. The Crimson team had but one serious contender for the premier honor on the skates. This was Princeton, but the Tigers had to bow to the superior skating and stick work of Harvard. Hockey has become the great winter sport at Harvard, and its popularity readily explains why the students there with a few exceptions and treated as a major sport.
