SURVIVORS OF THE VOLTURNO DISASTER RESCUED BY STEAMER KROONLAND.

The most pathetic figures aboard the rescue ship Kroonland, which arrived in New York last evening, were the women and children rescued from the burning vessel in midocean.

SAW NO CWARDICE ABOARD VOLTURNO

Capt. Inch Defends Officers and Crew of Ill-Fated Vessel.

NEW YORK, October 17.—Francis Inch, the boyish-looking Briton who commanded the burned steamer Voltorno, came to port last night, bringing with him eighty-seven survivors, passengers and crew, of his ill-fated vessel. His story of the disaster in which 130 lives were lost, had proceeded him by wireless, but in a cabin of the steamship Kroonland, which brought him here, Capt. Inch told his tale in simply phrased and modestly spoken detail that described still more vividly the panorama of the Voltorno's loss and the rescue of more than 500 of those she had on board. Of cowardice there was none on the Voltorno, either among officers or crew, Inch said. There was no rush of seamen which made it necessary for him to warn them back with his revolver. His revolver was in a drawer in his cabin, and it burned with the ship. No one on board drew a revolver, he added. These statements he intended should refute the stories told by stowaway passengers who arrived on the Grosvenor Kurfuerst.

Praise for Every One.

The Voltorno's master, besides defending his own officers and men, said he had no criticism to make of the tactics of any of the boats that stood by. "The Carmania did its best, the same as the others," he said. "There is nothing but praise for every one. I didn't expect a boat could live in those seas when the Carmania and the few ships came up." The Carmania did drop a boat, Inch declared, but it could not get near, for the Voltorno drifted faster than the crew could row. Eighteen cabin and two stowaway passengers entered the first lifeboat that ventured to leave the Voltorno. Only enough of the crew stepped in to man it, said Inch. It entangled itself in its after-tackle and capsized. All in it were drowned, except Chief Officer Miller and a steward.

One Boat Not Heard From.

Into the next boat went thirty passengers and ten sailors. This boat got away, but has not been heard from. The third boat took off forty, ten of them sailors. As she settled into the water ten more jumped aboard from the Voltorno's deck. A wave swept it under the Voltorno's stern. "She just set on it and crushed it out of sight," said Inch. "The boat's dived and was the only one to escape." Inch denied reports of rotting tackle and fire hoses and of unsafe lifeboats, all of which were in good condition, he said. He also denied stories of stowaway passengers that women were swept overboard and babies trampled on in a rush to be rescued in the Grosvenor Kurfuerst's first boat. "Before I climbed down I went over the ship to see if any one remained," Inch said. "The fire had eaten its way beyond amidships under the decks. I found no one alive, though there were bodies in the forecastle—men who had been cut off and burned to death.

Saves His Pet.

"I went to the rail with my dog, wrapping it in a blanket. I leaped over. Here, I said, 'catch my baby.' I dropped the dog into the arms of a Kroonland officer in the lifeboat. He opened the blanket tenderly. 'Why, it's a dog,' he said. 'I thought it was your kid.' Inch's three 'kids' and their mother are in London. One of his first acts upon arriving here was to send them a cablegram. Their father went thirty hours without eating or drinking, refusing to leave the work of his fighting. A blast of heat blinded him with pain. The skin peeled from his face when he received his first medical attention after being rescued. They had to drop cocaine into his eyes before he could see again.

INDIAN LAD PICKED UP BY A DEPUTY MARSHAL

Fugitive From School in North Carolina Found Crying for Food.

Deputy Marshal Harwood Read, assigned by the marshal's office to the Police Court, found a weeping and hungry Indian boy, bemoaning his fate, on the sidewalk in front of the Police Court about 10 o'clock this morning. He took charge of the lad, who gave his name as Stancel Jumper and his age as thirteen years, and kept him in his office for an hour or more, wondering what in the world to do with him. The boy said he was very hungry and Marshal Read got him something to eat. After he had eaten the boy grew more communicative, and said he had run away from the Cherokee Indian School on the Qualla reservation in North Carolina about two weeks ago.

Without Funds, He Says.

The lad said he went to Baltimore with a young Indian who was on his way to the Carlisle Indian School, in Pennsylvania. Although he was absolutely without funds, Stancel said he managed to make enough to get him to Washington, where he has been sking out a sort of hand-to-mouth existence for the past five or six days. "Two days ago he got a position cleaning up in a lunchroom, but was," he said, the next day. Last night the proprietor of another lunchroom allowed him to sleep in his place. This morning, tired of his adventure, dirty, ragged and hungry, the boy broke down and wept. Read telephoned the Indian office in the Interior Department, and the U. S. Commissioner of Indian Affairs, C. F. Hauke assigned F. L. Sharp to investigate the boy's case and to take care of him.

Wanted to See the World.

Sharp came to court and got the boy's record. The latter said he left his reservation partly because he "wanted to see the world," never having been farther away from the Indian school than one of two nearby towns, and partly because, he said, he "didn't get enough to eat at the reservation." Sharp returned and reported the matter to the office of the deputy marshal. It was announced that he will be sent back to the school by the first train after it is possible to make arrangements for his transportation, which will be paid by the government out of an emergency fund. Stancel says he wants to go back to the school and is sorry he left. He will, he says, but has agreed to put it off until a much later date. Fire Thursday destroyed the residence of E. H. Bethard at Crisfield, Md. The blaze started in or near the roof and it is thought that a defective fuse was the cause.

CHARWOMEN PROTEST OVER INCREASED WORK

Transfer of Help From Commerce Department Brings Issue to Congress.

With a building to clean which is much larger than the one they formerly had, and their force depleted, the charwomen of the Department of Commerce have filed a protest with the department heads. Following the transfer of help from the Department of Commerce to the new Department of Labor, the head charwomen of the Commerce Department protested to the chief clerk that she had more work than she could take care of with the depleted force. But the only answer the officials could give her was a statement that there was no means of providing for more help.

List of Transfers.

From the office of the Secretary the following were transferred to the Department of Labor: Edward Flagg, skilled laborer at $840; Alva D. Williams, Elwood C. Keyser and Edward B. Bach, watchmen at $720; Rufus Taylor and Walter J. Humphries, laborers at $600; Henry L. Heard, messenger boy at $480, and Mrs. Eliza Monroe, Miss Martha A. Wolfree, Mrs. Amy E. Dyer, Mrs. Mary E. N. Jackson and Mrs. Mammie Brooks, charwomen at $240. Other changes in the Commerce Department's personnel follow: The temporary appointment of Miss Anna M. McCarthy as clerk in the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce has been extended. Thomas E. B. Pope, assistant in the bureau of fisheries, has resigned. Thomas Bradford, skilled laborer, and Mrs. Mary A. Graves, Mrs. Margaret Williamson and Mrs. Catherine Mellington, charwomen, have been detailed from the bureau of the census to the office of the Secretary. In the bureau of fisheries Edgar C. FOR MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP.

Representative Cresser Tells Club of Cleveland's Railway Fight. Municipal ownership and operation of street railways was advocated by Representative Robert Cresser of Ohio, in an address before the Study Club in Ecumenical Church last evening. He urged his auditors to drop the fight for universal transfers and to take up the larger movement. He spoke of a similar fight which was made in Cleveland, his home city, in 1901, under the leadership of Tom L. Johnson. Representative Cresser has introduced a bill for the municipal ownership of railroads here. REV. E. C. REEVE GETS CALL.

Asked to Become Pastor of First Presbyterian Church. Rev. Dr. Edward C. Reeve, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Clearfield, Pa., has been called to the pastorate of the First Presbyterian Church in succession to Rev. Dr. Donald Campbell MacLeod, who now has a Springfield, Ill., pastorate. This action was taken at a meeting of the congregation held last evening at the church. Dr. Reeve, who had previously been in charge of a Philadelphia suburban church before going to Clearfield, preached in the First Church September 23, and at that time, it is understood, made a favorable impression on his hearers, a number suggesting thereafter that a meeting of the congregation be held immediately so that a call could be extended to him at once. At the session last evening Dr. Reeve was the only clergyman proposed for the vacancy, although the congregation has heard a number. The membership of the local congregation, which is the oldest of the denomination in the city, now numbers about 800.
