Miss Eleanor Randolph Wilson Becomes Bride of William Gibbs McAdoo.

FRIENDS AND RELATIVES WITNESS THE CEREMONY Formal Announcement of the Marriage Issued by President and Mrs. Wilson.

The marriage of Miss Eleanor Randolph Wilson, youngest daughter of the President and Mrs. Wilson, and William Gibbs McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury, took place last evening at 6 o'clock in the blue room of the White House.

The arrivals of the guests preceded the hour set for the ceremony by a few minutes. It gave time, however, for the assembled company to be grouped at each side of the aisle to the predieu arranged for the ceremony in the south bay window of the blue room.

Mrs. Wilson's entrance preceded that of the bride party by several minutes. The Marine Band played the wedding march. Rev. Sylvester M. Beach, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Princeton, N. J., where the Wilson family worshiped during their residence there, was officiating minister. His entrance was followed by that of Miss Sallie McAdoo, ten-year-old daughter of the Secretary, minister of honor.

The Presbyterian single-ring service was used, with the characteristic words "love, honor and obey." As the President gave the bride away there was an affectionate smile on his face.

Supper was served at small tables in the state dining room, while the Marine Band played. Miss Helen Woodrow Bones, cousin of the bride, is said to have drawn the ring token of early marriage from the favors hidden in the wedding cake, which the bride cut with Dr. Grayson's sword.

Little Anna Hamlin a thimble, token of spinsterhood. The wedding cake itself was the gift of and was made by the junior members of the National School of Domestic Arts and science and weighed forty pounds.

Later the young folks had a dance in the blue room, and in an unsuspecting moment Mr. and Mrs. McAdoo slipped into a waiting automobile and motored rapidly down Executive avenue.

The honeymoon journey begins. One of the big limousines of the White House took Secretary and Mrs. McAdoo, last night about 8 o'clock on the first lap of their honeymoon jaunt.

One of the big limousines of the White House took Secretary and Mrs. McAdoo, last night about 8 o'clock on the first lap of their honeymoon jaunt.

The plan worked and only a few persons were aware when the Secretary and his bride did leave.

An elaborate floral decoration was in place in each of the rooms, in which dogwood blossoms, lilacs and roses predominated, and gave an unusually festive air to the house, which was lighted by the effect of the blue room, where white satin ribbons were stretched from the north door to the dais in the circular south window.

The music program had met with Miss Margaret Wilson's approval and, after the entrance march, became a lively one to which the guests, young and old, danced merrily in the east room.

The bride's dress was perhaps a more elegant one than any other White House bride has ever worn. Wonderful lace train ribbon was stretched from the north door to the dais in the circular south window. The pre-ried was of white satin and the setting of palms and vases filled with lilacs reaching up from the floor made a pretty setting for the use during the few minutes of ceremony.

Mrs. Wilson's gown was of maize-colored embroidered chiffon and lace. The chiffon bodice had a soft, full front of lace, and the sleeves, of beauteous embroidery, had undersleeves of net and a touch of cerise satin.

The bride's attendants—her sisters, Mrs. Francis B. Sayre and Miss Margaret Wilson—wore gowns in pink and blue tulle and satin, respectively. The dresses were made alike. The tulle bodices had a square collar effect made of lace and lace, puffed sleeves with a ruffle which fell nearly to the edge of the double ruffled tunic, which was also of the tulle. The underskirts had the edge cut in scallops and edged with a tulle ruffle.

Special Correspondence of The Star. MISSOULA, Mont., May 3.—Many of the pupils in the high schools of Washington who are familiar with western life as portrayed in the moving picture shows do not realize that making-up, and in their present-day life, the North American Indians are as picturesque and far more interesting in their native haunts than they were before the white men invaded their hunting grounds.
