Carefully Treat Children's Colds

Neglect of children's colds often lays the foundation of serious lung trouble. On the other hand, it is harmful to continually dose delicate little stomachs with internal medicines or to keep the children always indoors.
Plenty of fresh air in the bedroom and a good application of Vicks' "Vapo-Rub" Salve over the throat and chest at the first sign of trouble, will keep the little chaps free from colds without injuring their digestion. 25c, 50c, & $1.00.

NOVELTY HATS OF THE SEASON. FOR THE HOME NEEDLEWORKER.

NEW HAT WITH A TRANSPARENT BRIM, DESIGNED BY LUCILE.

BY ANNE RITTENHOUSE.
Special Correspondence of The Star.
NEW YORK, April 20.—When a mannequin walked through an exclusive group of people wearing a flouzy, pink tulle frock with a tight bodice seamed in the back and front, a twenty-inch waist drawn in by a belt, a fish of white organdy ruffled with lace pulled over the shoulders, and a broad-brimmed hat made of white tulle and satin with a brim tilted in front to reach to the lips, through which her eyes gazed demurely, no one tried to keep quiet. There was a buzz of exclamations from one end of the room to the other.
After this mannequin had blazed the way another one appeared wearing a turban with a transparent brim that reached out from the forehead like a visor and came just to the top of her nose, where it was corded with narrow satin ribbon. This visor was of tulle, and the dark, heavily lashed eyes of the wearer gazed through it as does a Turkish woman.
By this time the selected audience was delightedly aware that a novelty was in the air; that it was being exploited at that moment and that, no matter who wore it on the streets, any one of these women could say that she had seen it at the hour of its birth.
Cromwell-Cavalier Neckwear.
With the turban went a flaring collar, not a fish, which is in keeping with some of the best of the season's neckwear. The French firm of Martial et Armand was responsible for the introduction of these wide white collars and cuffs that are sometimes called Cromwell and again Cavalier.
After this shape was established as an excellent piece of neckwear, the shops and the different dressmakers brought out their own versions of it. The collar worn by the mannequin in connection with the turban with its transparent brim that acted as a veil was so wide that it

New Neckwear.
Neckwear designs this season differ radically from those of last year because of the change from low to high neck. This naturally means either a considerable expenditure for new neckwear or considerable sewing in spare time at home. Homemade neckwear can be quite as dainty as that seen in the shops, and can be produced at much less cost.
Very fine, sheer voile is a new material used for neckwear. It is intended to supersede organdy, and to give it a quickly finished favor—if for no reason other than that it is very easily laundered. Since neckwear, being so attractive, must be ever fresh, anything which will tend to lessen the laundry work is sure to be appreciated. It is a close second to voile. This, too, is not difficult to keep clean, and it wears like iron.
Set in with embroidered trim. For example, a little vine in the front of the chemisette divides and runs on to the collar. This is worked with medium fine embroidery cotton in solid satin and outline stitch. The work is easy to do if the design be backed with tissue paper. The paper can be pulled away when the embroidery is finished.
The fluffy side frill is in vogue again. A jabot thus adorned will do much to glamorize a southerly dress or an out-of-date waist. There should be a number of these fluffy frills lying about the home, as it was so popular a model not long ago. Those who must make their own will need, for one jabot, half a yard of fluff, and for three-quarters to one yard of edging for the frill—according to the width of the frill.
English eyelet embroidery is favored some frills all else for the strip, though some frills are made and attached to a strip of the lace—both wider. Some models show the frill or hood of edging. In this case the jabot ends done cut in squares, split and butter and send to the table hot.

Kentucky Egg Bread.
Take two pints of cornmeal, three cups of buttermilk, two eggs, a scant teaspoonful of soda, a teaspoonful of salt, a tablespoonful of lard. Mix well, add the beaten eggs, pour in a well greased baking pan and bake quickly in a hot oven.
Florida Raised Corn Pone.
Into two cups of cornmeal mix one teaspoonful of salt and a teaspoonful of sugar. Scald with two cups of boiling water and let it stand until it becomes lukewarm. Then add half an ounce of compressed yeast dissolved in a little cold water; if too stiff reduce it with warm water to a consistency to retain its form; then put in a baking pan and let it rise. Bake in a moderate oven until thoroughly done. Better eaten fresh and warm, but is very nice toasted after it is a day or two old.
Distinctive Dresses.
A pretty gown of casement cloth is combined with a fine and soft printed cretonne. The casement cloth is in periwinkle blue, the cretonne has a buff ground almost hidden with clustering periwinkle-colored flowers and green foliage, and through all runs a line of black. It is further enhanced by black buttons and a sash of draped black ribbon, which in their turn are divided by bands of black velvet with the finest possible black tulle ruffles at the top and bottom. The quaint little frock is thus arranged, the ribbon pulled into confining bands of taffeta, the velvet like being of the cretonne, the brodered with scattered flowers in many colors, and a quaint cravat being formed of a host of narrow ribbons matching them, tied in a picturesque bow.
One of the new full-skirted evening gowns is quite fashioned of a plain soft, thin make of supple black satin, broadly inset with bands of fine black chintilly lace backed with flesh-colored nylon, which in their turn are divided by bands of black velvet with the finest possible black tulle ruffles at the top and bottom. The quaint little frock is thus arranged, the ribbon pulled into confining bands of taffeta, the velvet like being of the cretonne, the brodered with scattered flowers in many colors, and a quaint cravat being formed of a host of narrow ribbons matching them, tied in a picturesque bow.
A size blue and white dotted silk is girlish in simplicity, with a jaunty Eton jacket in plain blue taffeta. A little rose of blue is introduced in two medallions on the jacket and on each sash end falling at the side.

IN THE KITCHEN AND PANTRY
Dandelion Salad.
Pick over and wash very carefully, using only the tender inner leaves; lay in cold water to become crisp, then place in salad bowl and grate a little onion over. Dress with one tablespoonful of oil to three of vinegar, adding salt, pepper and a little sugar.
Oatmeal and Apples.
Wash, halve and core four large, tender apples. Make a syrup of one cup of granulated sugar and a cupful and a half of water. When the syrup begins to thicken drop in the apples and cook until tender.
Florida Corn Bread.
One cup cold boiled hominy, one scant cup white cornmeal, one generous cup milk, one egg, one tablespoonful buttermilk, one-half teaspoonful salt, one teaspoonful baking powder. Beat hominy with fork until thoroughly broken; then gradually beat in the milk and buttermilk. Add the salt with the meal; add all to the hominy and milk; then add the egg well beaten. Pour the mixture into two buttered deep tin plates. Bake in quick oven twenty minutes.

AMERICAN FASHIONS.
BY LILLIAN E. YOUNG.
Three-quarter-length outing coats are the rule this season. Made up in entirely new patterns and materials, they seem better than ever before and more suited to their varied uses—motoring, on the links, boating, etc.
Here is a wrap in the form of a big, loose-sleeved coat, which will make the nicest sort of a "sport" coat, serviceable, and one that can be worn over thin evening frocks as well. It is made of a double-surfaced polo cloth (summer weight), white on one side and marked off with a green cross-hatch check on the other.
The loose sleeves are draped a little below the elbow and held under a cloth-covered button, which tops the opening of a set-on circuit cuff. A broad, square collar is turned back from the neck and buttoned down on either shoulder with other cloth-covered buttons.
The right front laps diagonally across the left. The skirt portion is full, being laid in folds, where it is attached to the top at an empire waist line above the broad belt. The

SPRING TOWELS.
The woman who likes handwork can do no better than to make a supply of guest towels. Each is a small amount of work, and yet when they are grouped in half-dozen lots they appear to be an accomplishment of no meaness.
An interesting finish for a guest towel was devised shortly after Christmas by a woman who had received a gift of some linen handkerchiefs finished with a little colored crocheted edge. She edged towel ends in the same way, using a heavy, twisted, mercerized floss, in various colors, for the purpose. A third of an inch from the ends of the towels, made of duck-linen, two or three threads are drawn, and the crocheted hook, of steel, is worked into this space. A picot edge is crocheted all across the end of the towel, and above it is placed a letter, in the same color as the edge, in satin stitch or cross stitch. These towels are decidedly effective and are not difficult to make.
Cross-stitch designs of all sorts are still used on guest towels. Nothing is prettier than the wreath of blue, pink, green and yellow worked in cross stitch. There are also effective baskets and other conventionalized figures.
Special little towels are made for babies and some for those who like chickens or ducks outlined in a panel at one edge, with the background formed of colored threads run into the huckaback.
Bath towels have long been in the ranks of the decorated towel. Colored initials, sometimes worked into the fringes, sometimes worked on when insets and embroidered into position, are widely used. Often, too, there is a scalloped border done in color, with an initial or monogram to match.

Corn Batter Bread.
Pour one cup of boiling water over one cup of white cornmeal (or keep to this proportion) in which was sifted one-fourth teaspoonful of salt. Mix until smooth, cover closely and set aside to steam for about ten minutes. Then add three well beaten eggs and a cup and a half of milk, or sufficient milk to make a thin batter. Pour the batter into a well buttered and oiled earthenware baking dish to the depth of two inches or less, and bake for about ten minutes. The batter should be almost like baked custard and should be served from the baking dish with a spoon piping hot and generously buttered.

Corn Chowder.
One and one-half cups of buttermilk, three tablespoons of melted lard or butter, one teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of baking soda, one and one-half cups of cornmeal, one egg.
Stir well, and then beat in the melted lard or butter and the salt. Beat the mixture until it is stiff, then add the butter and flour together, add the milk, stir until boiling, and add it to the chowder. Stir the whole carefully to steam for about ten minutes. Then add three well beaten eggs and a cup and a half of milk, or sufficient milk to make a thin batter. Pour the batter into a well buttered and oiled earthenware baking dish to the depth of two inches or less, and bake for about ten minutes. The batter should be almost like baked custard and should be served from the baking dish with a spoon piping hot and generously buttered.

Virginia Corn Bread.
Three cups of white meal, one cup of flour, one tablespoonful of sugar, one teaspoonful of salt, two heaping teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one tablespoonful of lard, three cups of milk and three eggs. Sift together the flour, cornmeal, sugar, salt and baking powder. Rub in the lard, add the milk, well beaten eggs, and then the flour. Mix into a moderately stiff batter, pour into well greased shallow baking pans and bake from thirty to forty minutes.

Johnnie Cake Old Plantation Style.
Sift one quart of cornmeal into a pan, make a hole in the middle and pour in a pint of warm water, adding one teaspoonful of salt with a spoonful of sugar. Mix the water gradually into a soft dough. Stir it very hard for several minutes until it becomes light and spongy; and spread the dough smoothly and evenly on a straight, flat board or piece of lard with a spoon. Bake with a hot fire, and a flour barrel will serve for this purpose. Place the board nearly upright before an open fire and put an iron against the back support it. Bake it well, and when

Mrs. Kern's Advice
To Weak, Nervous, Run-down Women.
So, Cumberland, Md.—"For a long time, but ten or twelve years ago, I could not get out of bed and was so weak I could hardly walk. My doctor gave me Vinol and got me to try it.
