Notes of Interest.

The Duchess of Manchester, formerly Miss Helen Zimmermann of Cincinnati, Ohio, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dwight Wilcox at their home on New Hampshire avenue. Her highness arrived last week, and Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox entertained guests at dinner in her honor. Tomorrow Mrs. Gist Blair will entertain a distinguished company at luncheon at Elm Place, Silver Spring, Md., her country home, in compliment to the duchess, who will remain as Mrs. Wilcox's guest for several days longer.

There are a number of Washington's society folk who knew quite intimately the three interesting aunts of the Duchess of Manchester, the Misses Evans of Cincinnati. Miss Helen Evans, for whom the duchess was named, partly raised her, and they were inseparable companions. Another aunt, Miss Etta Evans, was for years connected with the James Gordon Bennett paper in Paris as one of its most interesting writers, and her acquaintance abroad embraced almost every titled man and woman of literary interest on that side. Another aunt, Miss Martha Evans, was a distinguished artist, devoting her life to the study. She, by the way, was an intimate friend of Mrs. Wintermute, the mother of Mrs. Franklin K. Lane, who was herself a devotee of art. These three aunts, who shaped the education and destiny of the Duchess of Manchester, were termed by their friends the most original and interesting women they ever knew, and their personality was delightful.

Mrs. Richard H. Townsend and her daughter, Mrs. Peter Goeliet Gerry, have gone to New York for a visit. Mrs. Townsend is at the Plaza, and will probably decide upon her summer plans during her absence. Mrs. Gerry is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Elbridge T. Gerry, where her husband, Mr. Gerry, has been a guest for some time.

Mrs. John R. Williams will return to Washington early this week from Boston, where she has been in connection with settling there for the season. Col. Williams will return there with her daughter, Miss Frances Williams, who is here with her father, will make a series of visits, including one to Miss Marie Dimpfel on the eastern shore of Maryland, and another to Mrs. and Mrs. Wittich at Bar Harbor before joining them for the summer.

Mrs. James F. Mitchell will go to Bar Harbor this week to open her summer home for the season. Dr. Mitchell will join her there later.

Rear Admiral and Mrs. William K. Van Rypen left here yesterday for California to visit the exposition, and will not return here until autumn.

Mrs. Mahlon Pitney will go to her home at Monticello, N. J., this week, and will be joined there by Mr. Justice Pitney when the Supreme Court ends its session.

Mrs. Ezra Koon and her daughter, Miss Edith Koon, left Washington yesterday for their home in Michigan, where they will spend the summer.

The commissioner of patents and Mrs. Ewing and Miss Alexandra Ewing and their sons, Thomas and William Ewing, expect to go to their home, Pine Hill, Sorrento, Me., within a week. The home there is a delightful place, and will place them in close touch with the Washington folk who are at Bar Harbor.

Joy Farm Scene of Supper and Dance.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Eichelberger gave a supper followed by a dance last night at Joy Farm, the beautiful summer home of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Joy Edson, near Rockville. American beauty roses and daisies formed the decoration throughout the lower floor of the house, where the dancing took place. These flowers also adorned the supper table.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Farker, Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bradley, Mr. and Mrs. John Joy Edson, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Drum Hunt, Mr. and Mrs. John Whitaker, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Barnard, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Foster, Miss Louise Reeside, Miss Litchstein, Mrs. William Hammons, Mr. Brummelcamp, Mr. Harry Meem and Mr. Thomas Jackson.

Gowns and Their Wearers.

Mrs. Daniels, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, who was hostess at a garden party the past week at Single of White Embroidery. Oak, welcomed her guests in a charming gown of white eyelid embroidery.

The gown is made with moderately full skirt, and cut in widths, each width being edged with scallops of the handsome embroidery, with the scallops extending over the seams, and on one side near the hem there is a slash, revealing a bit of the underskirt, which is also scalloped about the bottom.

The surplice bodice is filled in in the V neck with soft folds of lace, and Mrs. Daniels wore with this gown a Panama hat trimmed with a white silk-embroidered scarf.

Mrs. Bryan, wife of the former Secretary of State, who assisted Mrs. Daniels, and who probably then made her appearance at a big garden party for some time, and who, at any rate, was present for the last time, as a "cavalier" wore a very smart suit of pongee. The plain tailored skirt was partly covered by the coat, which reached halfway between the hips and the knees and was belted in the back and trimmed with numerous small rimmed buttons, the seams below the belt line being defined with rows of the tiny buttons, and the opening down the front being likewise trimmed with them.

Her hat on that occasion was a black leghorn or crin in the new shape, a cross between a turban and a toque, and was trimmed with roses of a subdued shade of pink.

Another garden party of the week brought forth a number of lovely gowns, one of the

Mrs. Harlow's smartest being a lovely gown, Richard Harlow, which was of chamoise and chiffon in a fetching shade of light-sage green. This gown is distinctive by reason of its fashioning and the embroidery which ornaments the bodice, or bolero jacket. It is made with an underskirt of taffeta and a long tunic of chiffon, the latter cut in rounded points which are bound with taffeta and reach to the bottom of the gown, at the deepest part of the big scallops.

There is a wide girde which is brought up in front under the bolero, which falls in two long points, one on either side, these reaching several inches below the waist line. The back is similar with one deep pointed fall of chiffon instead of two. The bolero is bordered with a brodered self-toned floss, and there is a moderately high rolling collar of beige chiffon, with ends extending down to the neck.

Mrs. Harlow wore with this gown a brown straw hat and tulle ruche also of brown.

Mrs. Ritter had a very pretty frock of taffeta, a medium blue with narrow rows of stripes of beige, the stripes broken at intervals with circular dots as large as half-dollars.

This frock is quite full and circular with tunic draped out front and back in points. The bodice is circular with big arm size in which are set in cream embroidered net sleeves, and the girde is a rich old gold color.

Mrs. Mason Gulick wore a charming frock of dead white taffeta combined with Georgette crepe.

The gown is made with an underskirt of taffeta with tunic of Georgette crepe tucked in the tucks about the bottom, with wider tuck on the sides which is bound with a two-inch fold of taffeta.

There are long sleeves of the crepe and surplice folds of taffeta. Inside the V formed by the surplice folds are ribbons of taffeta with folds of crepe inside of them.

This dainty gown Mrs. Gulick supplements with a hat quite as charming, a very broad white chifon with white chamoise. Outside it is entirely covered with the crepe chifon, and about the base of the crown is a wreath of tiny white roses.

Mrs. Willis, wife of Capt. Willis of the Marine Corps, was charming in a black chamoise gown combined with white chifon and black chifon.

It has a full skirt with several rows of cording about the bottom, and also about the upper part, making a yoke over the hips.

There are black chifon sleeves and a corsage trimming of white chifon, aimed at the front from being of the soft white chifon, over which opens a coatee of black chamoise.

A vestee combines both black and white chifon with standing up rolling collar in the back. Mrs. Willis wore with this gown a big black chifon and straw hat, trimmed with snappy black wings, and about her shoulders a white fox scarf.

Mrs. Barnett, who was hostess at the garden party, wore a pink brocaded Chinese crepe, Mrs. Barnett wears made very full, with hoops about the bottom, the material being laid flat over the hoops, and standing out as a very full, quite as did our grandmother's frocks.

The trimming on this new-fashion old-fashioned gown is a row of cord about the bottom of the skirt and a very deep girde consisting of folds of the salmon pink crepe and a deep shade of robin's egg blue crepe. Above the girde the bodice is entirely of cream lace, including the sleeves.

There is also a big kimono bow in the back of pink and blue, which contrary to the usual habit of kimono bows slants at a cat-corner angle instead of lying straight across.

Mrs. Barnett's hat was a pink chifon, a poke shape trimmed with a severely tailored bow of white grograin ribbon, with clusters of yellow and pink roses combined with forget-me-nots.

Charles McCawley, wife of Col. McCawley of the Marine Corps, poured tea, and wore a black chamoise and chifon gown, combined with white lace.

Mrs. Frances Ruggles is wearing a smart gown of changeable blue taffeta, with quite full, Mrs. Ruggles wears skirt with bolero jacket effect, the chief feature of which, however, is draped with an elaborate grape vine pattern on it picked out in steel beads.

Mrs. Ruggles wears a small blue hat with it, and long earrings made of links of platinum with small diamonds, thus carrying out the effect of the steel embroidery.

Mrs. Delos Blodgett wears a handsome gown of dark-blue crepe made with bands of embossed blue taffeta, in varying widths about the skirt, the bands being put on half way between waist and hem.

The kimono bodice is also trimmed with embroidered chifon and corsage of creamy lace. Mrs. Blodgett wears with it a soft brimmed braid hat, in a garden shape, with wreath of purple pansies spotted with yellow clusters of yellow flowers. There are long streamers of purple tulle, which fasten to the wrists with wristbands of velvet, with tiny roses on each band.

Mrs. Blodgett also wears a dark blue willow taffeta which is made with full skirt, the bottom appearing to be a depth of a foot or more, and fastened to the skirt with buttons and rosettes. Another unique feature of the gown is crushed edging of cerise taffeta, and the employment of embroidered net for sleeves, the embroidery being done in Russian colors.

The bodice is fashioned on the order of a bolero, with a rummy collar falling over the iridle in the manner of a blouse. Over this sometimes, Mrs. Blodgett of the gown is crushed edging of blue silk, made with raglan sleeves and the fullness drawn toward the back, where it is held in place by a band of rose or silk in wide, which crosses the back from seam to seam.

Mrs. Theodore Baldwin wears a dark blue gabardine tailored suit, with a kilted skirt and mannish jacket, and a long, dark blue sash.

Mrs. Baldwin in Dark Blue Gabardine.

This chic parol is of dark blue taffeta with a wide hand about the edge fully eight inches deep, the center of which is a rummy collar, while the outer edges are striped in blue and green. The shape is a rather flat Japanese model.

Mrs. Mary Graham, daughter of the assistant attorney general, wears a semi-tailored plum-colored taffeta frock, the accessories for which are all of white.

There is a white leather belt and white organdie collar and vestee. She wears white shoes with black trimmings, a tailored white straw hat and a white fox scarf.

Mrs. Julian Ripley, who is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Bell, wears a very smart suit of dark blue serge, whose simplicity gives it its charm.

There is a plain, slightly full skirt and tailored jacket with two-inch belt, below which the hip-length coat skirt falls in ripples. Her hat with this is a large sailor of black satin and chifon, the crown being of satin, the brim of chifon, and at the left in front is a large saffron-colored rose tilted on the edge of the brim. She wears also a white fox scarf.

Mrs. George Choate Kendall is wearing a severely plain tailored suit of blue serge, with a wide sash of rough tulle in ripples. Her hat with this is a large sailor of black satin and chifon, the crown being of satin, the brim of chifon, and at the left in front is a large saffron-colored rose tilted on the edge of the brim. She wears also a white fox scarf.

Mrs. Kendall in a shade of light blue, a deeper than the natural linen. It has the rather long coat popular with some, reaching almost or quite to the knees in back.

It is a suit-way model, extending about six inches below the belt in front and gradually deepening to the knees in the back. It is a significant point that Mrs. Kendall's skirt is more narrow than full, and Mrs. Kendall has just returned with her from Paris.

Miss Howard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Beale Howard, is wearing a very smart frock, which goes to the other end of the measures fully nine yards around the bottom, and is nine inches from the floor. The gown is of striped dark blue taffeta. The stripes, which are about a quarter of an inch in width and about an inch apart, are of a lighter shade of blue and also of red.

There are three two-inch tucks about the bottom, and around the middle of the skirt, half way between the hem and the belt, is a wide flounce about eighteen inches deep, which is shirred on the skirt and scalloped about the bottom, the flounce giving even an additional fullness to the already bouffant skirt.

There is a deep yoke of shirring about the hips, where the fullness of the skirt is shirred into the belt. The bodice is made with bolero with long sleeves of chifon, which are decidedly bell-shaped at the bottom, where they are gathered into a wrist band of taffeta.

The three elder children of Mr. and Mrs. Walcott Tuckerman, little family in Quaint Frocks, are all who see and sweet are they in the little, old-fashioned frocks in which their mother dresses them.

They accompany their parents to church every Sunday morning, and last Sunday morning they were three very demure little ladies in smoked frocks of linen or pongee, the little slips being smoked in white about the neck, the white bands and falling loose from the neck. They wore light brown mushroom straw hats, each enriched with a wreath of parti-colored flowers.

They are always dressed alike, and the youngest, a little girl, is about four, the next five and the eldest six. In the winter they all wore full-length coats and cuffs with bands of otter fur and big button of the fur.

Gossip of Society.

The approaching departure from Washington of Mrs. William Jennings Bryan, wife of the Secretary of State, will bring to the fore Mrs. Robert Lansing, wife of the Secretary of State ad interim, because upon her will devolve for the next month the duty of such entertaining as has fallen to the lot of the wife of the Secretary.

Mrs. Lansing is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Foster, and Mr. and Mrs. Lansing live with them at their home on 18th street. She is widely versed in the duties of Washington society, her father having been Secretary of State in days gone by, and one of the noted diplomats of his time here and abroad.

Mrs. Lansing is popular in her own circles. Her entertaining in the past has been of the conservative character, but it is more than likely that heavier demands will now be made upon her.

While Mrs. Bryan has always prided herself upon being more of a domestic woman, her husband, she has made a large circle of friends in Washington while her husband has been Secretary of State, and she will be greatly missed. Mrs. Bryan has gone in for studious things. She is a law-abiding citizen, and she has been a great help to him. As an instance of her domesticity her friends recall a trip she once made to Lincoln, Neb., from Washington that she might personally superintend the raising up of fruit from the home grounds, Mrs. Bryan occupying herself with canning and preserving while her husband was lecturing.

There is considerable talk among the women of society as to the possibility that in case President Wilson should decline to have what the men call a bipartisan cabinet either Mrs. Root or Mrs. Knox may come back to Washington as the wife of the Secretary of State. It is a possibility that in case of course would be quite a novelty, but while the men are all talking about that possibility the women are recalling all the interesting things they know about Mrs. Root and Mrs. Knox. Mrs. Root has been here this week, the former Secretary having been in Washington on business. They keep their house on K street open all the time, and that the men call it as they like. Mr. Knox's profession often requiring his attendance upon the Supreme Court of the United States.

This house is the former home of George W. Childs, the Philadelphia philanthropist. Mr. Knox having bought it when he was senator from Pennsylvania. Mr. and Mrs. Knox left here Wednesday, and motored over to Valley Forge, where they have a large country home, surrounded by the homes of their sons and their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Tindal.

Mrs. Knox has always been one of the most smartly gowned women of official Washington society, and for her trip to Washington she wore a light weight dark blue novelty goods gown, a kilted skirt and simple little tailored jacket. With this she wore a dark blue straw hat, a first cousin to a sailor and jauntily trimmed with dark blue satin ribbon, and a rosette of French posies.

Although not naturally fond of social life, Mrs. Knox always did her part in the social campaign and routine of the official season and was the acme of hospitality as a hostess.

Mrs. Root is another woman who has had a long and varied experience with the duties that devolve upon an official hostess. She has lived in Washington when her husband has served as senator, as Secretary of War and as Secretary of State. During the latter part of her sojourn in Washington Mrs. Root was in poor health and took little or no part in the social life.

Prior to that Mrs. Root had been a popular hostess and a frequent dinner guest. She was greatly assisted by her daughter in her entertaining, the latter being Mrs. Ulysses S. Grant, jr.

An interesting story is being told about Mr. John R. McLean. Mr. McLean is very fond of taking walks in the business district, disdaining the use of any automobile or carriage, as a rule, when he wishes to go from one place to another or to take the air in a saunter along the crowded thoroughfares. The other day he was strolling down F street and happened to see in a photographer's display window a complete collection of photographs of all the prominent persons who have been identified with the controversy between the Riggs National Bank and officials of the Treasury Department.

A fancy struck Mr. McLean to have the collection, and he marched himself into the photographer's and bought the collection outright, having it sent home, and thus breaking up one of the most interesting window displays on F street.

Mrs. John B. Henderson has molded two busts of Postmaster General Burleson which are very fine. Mrs. Henderson considered good luck in the matter. One has just been cast in bronze, and the other will be later on. It is Mrs. Henderson's intention to place one of the busts in Meridian Hill Park, if she can obtain the necessary permission, when the park is completed.

Mrs. Henderson has some reputation as a sculptress, and paints also. She has always been known as a distinguished patroness of the arts, and has one of the best collections of paintings in Washington. She has collected for years, and all the available space on the walls of her home, so far as the drawing room floor is concerned, is filled with pictures on all subjects.

Mrs. William Barrett Ridgeley expects to go shortly to Bass Rock on the north shore of Massachusetts, where she and her mother will spend the summer. While on the coast Mrs. Ridgeley always gathers clusters of bayberries to bring home to her friends and to decorate her own house. When the berries are picked they are green. As they ripen they become more round and turn a beautiful silvery white. Mrs. Ridgeley has a cluster of these berries in a copper vase on a bookcase in her library which she remarks that position all winter, and instead of drying it has seemed to grow handsomer as it grows older. The berries make a very lovely bit of decoration in their feathery silverness against the rich red of the wall. Many Washington society women owe a gift of such a decoration to her thoughtfulness during the summer.

Many persons who think that society women have nothing to do but amuse themselves in a little story of her governess. Mrs. Peter Goeliet Gerry, formerly Miss Mathilde Townsend.

Hardly a day passes but what Mrs. Gerry manages to make time to go over from her own house on Massachusetts avenue to the home of her former governess, in the same block on F street, for a friendly visit. The devotion of Mrs. Gerry for her governess of former days is remarked upon, and, rain or shine, she always gives some of her time to entertaining her friend of former days.

Summer Plans.

Mrs. Nelson Read Johnson has closed her house and gone to her summer home at Cape Cod.

Mr. and Mrs. George Howard expect to spend the summer at Newport, where they have taken a cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. William Corcoran Hill will spend the summer at Narragansett Pier.

Justice and Mrs. Hughes, accompanied by their family, will leave late in June for Rangeley, Me., where they will spend the summer.
