BRITISH AEROPLANE TESTION SUBMARINE

Commander Bigsworth Destroys Enemy Craft With Bomb Near Ostend.

UNDERSEAS MENACE DEEMED WELL IN HAND

Warfare Against German U-Boats Believed to Be Effective—Many Vessels Recently Lost, However.

LONDON, August 27.—A German submarine has been destroyed near Ostend, Belgium, by a bomb dropped by an aeroplane. Official announcement to this effect has just been made here.

The secretary of the admiralty announced that Squadron Commander Arthur W. Bigsworth, R. N., destroyed single-handed a German submarine this morning by bombs dropped from an aeroplane. The submarine was observed to be completely wrecked and sank off Ostend.

It is not the practice of the admiralty to publish statements regarding the losses of German submarines, important though they have been, in cases where the enemy has not other source of information as to the time and place at which these losses have occurred.

"In the case referred to above, however, the brilliant feat of Squadron Commander Bigsworth was performed in the immediate neighborhood of the coast in occupation of the enemy, and the position of the sunken submarine has been located by a German diver."

Statement Arouses Interest.

The declaration of the Earl of Selborne, president of the board of agriculture, that the British admiralty has the German submarine menace well in hand, has aroused the greatest interest in Great Britain.

The statement lends color to recent unofficial reports that the British have of late months captured a very large number of these submersible vessels and that many others have been sunk.

Since the beginning of the war the British official reports, however, have accounted for but one German submarine besides the one the destruction of which was announced yesterday, although there have been vague references to submarines being rammed or sunk by undersea mines in the British channel, and in one instance a reward offered by the admiralty for the sinking of a submarine has been paid to a British merchantman. A German official report, however, subsequently stated that this submarine had safely returned to her port.

Admiralty Is Satisfied.

There have been no official intimations as to what method, offensive or defensive, has been taken by the British navy against submarines, although the admiralty previously has announced its satisfaction with these measures.

Americans returning to the United States have described the new British anti-submarine hunting, and have said that great numbers of small high-powered and very speedy motor boats, mounting guns of small caliber, have constantly searched the coastal waters of Great Britain for months. There also have been repeated stories of an extensive system of submarine nets in channel waters, and even of one submarine net that extends entirely across the English channel, with guard boats at the opening.

It is a notable fact that for nearly a year the Franco-British naval transport service across the English channel, by means of which hundreds of thousands of troops have been transported, has been maintained so far as is known, on a single troopship having been sunk by a submarine in these waters.

Many Vessels Recently Sunk.

Notwithstanding the Earl of Selborne's claim, during the week ending August 25 nineteen British merchant vessels with a total tonnage of 82,000 and three fishing vessels were destroyed by submarines or mines. The week was one of the most successful German underwater craft have had since the commencement of the war.

Fourteen steamers with a total gross tonnage of 47,688 were sunk by German submarines August 19 and 20. The largest of them was the Arabic, Ton of these vessels were British and four sailed under neutral flags.

WANTS FRENCH CHILDREN TO PRAY FOR SUCCESS

Paris Official Suggests Two Forms to Be Used to Implant Patriotism in Their Minds.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

PARIS, August 16.—Municipal Councilor Louis Daussat, in a commencement-day address at a co-educational communal school, held in the building of the National school of arts and crafts, proposed that in every school in France the teaching should have the pupils repeat, at the opening of every day's classes, like an old-fashioned prayer, a formula which might be looked upon as an act of faith and patriotic hope—everywhere the same.

"Some of the fathers," he said, "could conceive a brief text which by being adopted by the government could become official.

"This simple formula should embody two cardinal ideas—the first should be for use until the final freeing of the invaded regions of France, and the second should remain unchanged, even after the war.

"The children of France, first of all, would turn their quickened memories and their heroic bodies, united in the sense of brotherhood toward those Frenchmen who live in the territory occupied by the enemy, and who by their courage, and their martyrdom—keep the soul of France safe from any invasion.

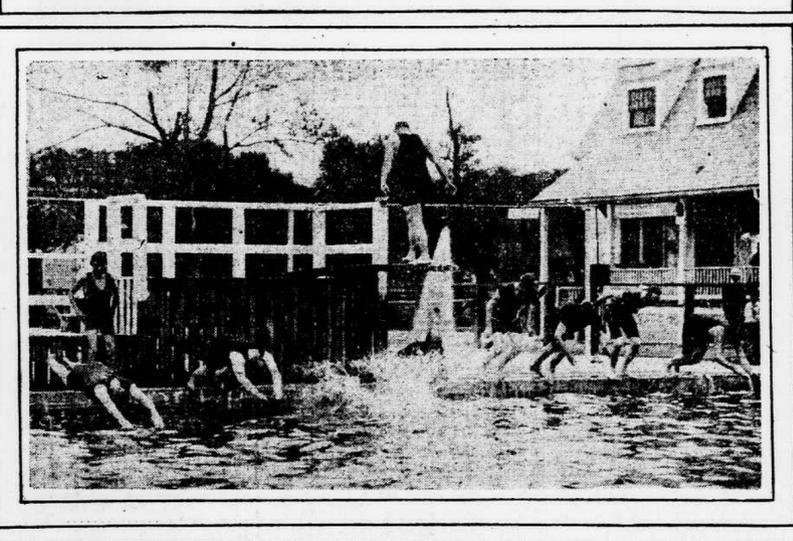

"Morning and evening, the dearest wishes of the children of France would fly to them as witness that the free portions of the nation suffer in the measure of their servitude, and that there is not one Frenchman who is not ready to make every sacrifice for their liberation as soon as possible, when indeed depends the safety of the fatherland.

"The second idea would be to send in some form a pious salutation to the dead whose blood has impregnated victory and whose heroic bodies, united in the glorious sepulture of the fields of France, form along the whole front the guard of honor of France. The children of France would wear to exalt in their hearts and never to forget their sublime example.

"Thus by the daily repetition of two simple, necessary ideas, the reason, the sentiment and the conscience of all the children of France could be raised to the moral level of our wonderful soldiers, who every day are fighting and dying for the triumph of France and of civilization."

Distraught over family troubles, Israel Katovsk, twenty-five years old, shot himself at his home in Baltimore, the bullet penetrating his side and piercing the wall of the stomach. His condition is critical.

LOCAL POLICEMEN BRAVE COLD AIR AND WATER TO LEARN ART OF SWIMMING AT BATHING POOLS.

Police Officer F. J. Brunner of the harbor precinct was on hand at the bathing beach at 10 o'clock this morning, the hour set for the opening of the twenty-day session of the swimming school for policemen and civilian employees of the police department. The session lasted from 10 to 11 o'clock, and most of the forty-seven members of the class scheduled for today were in attendance.

Sergt. G. M. Dixon was in charge, each member of the class reporting to him when he reached the beach. Sergt. Dixon will be on duty until September 2, when Detective Joe Grant will succeed him. September 10 Grant will be succeeded by Sergt. L. J. Stoll.

Members of the Class.

Members of today's class were A. C. Ogle, Harry Powell, J. J. Ryan, S. B. Sanders, J. M. Roper, H. P. Short, Karl Scherer, G. A. Totten, C. H. Tucker, J. W. Watson, J. A. Frewell, Louis Armstrong, J. P. Billman, L. E. Cox, W. N. Corbin, Vernon Eskridge, R. E. Drummond, W. H. Garth, George I. Hellmuth, H. M. Jett, J. J. Knight, R. H. Mansfield, P. S. Strawser, E. P. Turner, W. D. Vaughan, A. W. Lippold, W. C. McGinness, J. S. Matthews, A. L. Peck, W. S. Thomas, David Crouch, E. P. Alexander, J. E. Boyle, John Burke, John Boland, J. A. Conrad, W. S. Fones, C. O. Koomer, Roney Fasseno, Jr., T. F. Quinlan, J. J. Housh, J. W. Smith, L. J. Stoll, A. E. Smoot and W. C. Lewis.

Women were in possession of the bathing beach when the early arrivals from the police department reached there. The number of women and children in attendance was much smaller than usual because of the chilly atmosphere. There were less than one hundred there this morning as against nearly one thousand Wednesday.

Brunner instructed many swimmers in the more difficult strokes, and those that are necessary to be employed in saving drowning persons. He found that most of the members of the class possessed some knowledge of swimming, although not many of them were experts. The hour for Mondays and Fridays will be from 10 to 11 o'clock, while other days it will be from 9 to 10 o'clock.

The day's lessons ended with an exciting swimming contest, in which a number of policemen participated.

URGES DEVELOPMENT OF NATURAL RESOURCES

Gov. Lister of Washington State Believes National Government Should Take Up Work.

Picturing the great things which might be accomplished through the fullest development of the natural resources of the state of Washington, Gov. Ernest Lister of that state, on a brief visit to the nation's capital while en route to the conference of governors at Boston, expressed the belief that Congress should pass legislation providing for such development throughout the country. Gov. Lister is firm in the belief that development does not mean a waste of the nation's resources, but rather means their true conservation.

His Own State Cited.

"For instance, the state of Washington has twenty-four salmon hatcheries and six trout hatcheries. During the last year thousands upon thousands of small salmon were turned into the water of the state. In this manner we have fish today and yet are providing them for the years to come. We have 5,000,000 potential horsepower in the water of the state. This water is going into the ocean. If it were used for power it would still go there, but in the great use we could get out of it." The states of Washington, California and Oregon have 42 per cent of the water power of the entire country.

"Last year, on our 3,000 miles of steam railroads, more than 2,500,000 tons of coal were used. Surely this is not conservation. The electrification of all these railroads might be accomplished through the development of our state's water power."

Says Lands Should Be Reforested.

Gov. Lister does not believe that forest lands, from which the timber has been removed, should be used for agricultural purposes, but rather that these lands should be reforested. He urges that land in the great west, that has been cleared, and that has been abandoned, should be replanted, and that the citizen-soldier should join in the work. He has prepared a paper on conservation and development, which he is to read before the governors.

"Speaking of the proposition for national defense, another topic," he said, "I think the great west should be reforested. Personally I do not wish to see a large standing army. I should like to see the citizen-soldier, as the National Guard, increased. I believe men should continue in productive lines, but be trained to serve their country in case of need.

"I do not believe in compulsory military service, but should like to see the men join from patriotic impulses. Our National Guard is not so large—between 1,000 and 1,200—but holds a high rank in efficiency. We have five companies of coast artillery. These are the fairest at San Francisco and San Diego, Cal. In fact, they had their two weeks' encampment there last month.

Gov. Lister explained that many of the questions which are now stirring the east were long since settled by the west. "We have woman suffrage, and it has worked out satisfactorily. January 1913 the nation suffered from a drought in Oregon and Idaho, as well as in some of the other states not so far west, and the fair at San Francisco and San Diego, Cal. In fact, they had their two weeks' encampment there last month.

NOTABLE INSTANCES OF SURGICAL SCIENCE

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

LONDON, August 16.—Some remarkable instances of surgical science have been brought to light during the present war, but the following story, telling how a horribly mutilated soldier was "reconstructed" from his own limbs, adds one more miracle to the list. A French newspaper correspondent was admitted to the Rothschild Hospital to see for himself the miracle in question after the surgeons had completed their work. The correspondent saw a photograph of a man wounded in the French trenches. It was a terrible picture. The face lacked the lower portion of the left cheek, the chin had gone and also the lips and nose.

While the correspondent was looking at this appalling picture, traces of hospital assistants made a sign to one of the patients who was just going out to spend an afternoon at a picture show.

"Here is our man," said the assistant.

The correspondent stared uncomprehendingly, but the assistant added, with a smile: "Yes, I assure you, this is the patient whose photograph you have in your hand—the man who was brought into the hospital without his cheek, jaw, lips, chin and nose."

The correspondent at first thought the assistant was fooling him, but the patient who was just going out bore few signs of the dreadful wounds depicted in the photograph. His right cheek was the twin brother of his left cheek; he had an excellent chin, lips that opened in a genial smile and a nose of perfect contour. His face bore only the rapidly vanishing traces of some cuts and a few white marks occasioned by surgical sewing. The patient himself proceeded to confirm the assistant's assertions, talking in the slang of the French infantryman.

"Yes, it's myself. 'Wasn't any good for the Germans to snoot my portrait. The doctors tricked them after all. As you see, he has manufactured for me a very decent face. For myself, I think he has improved it, and I believe they'll find me more of a nut when I get back into the country."

Then he lighted a cigarette and went off to see the show.

The correspondent took a portion of the patient's back and used it to replace the cheek. With the skin of the back he fashioned the lips. Then he took a portion of the patient's stomach to make the nose and the substance of the chin. From the forehead he took the skin for the nose, and from the skin at his new face, the doctor asked him if there was anything he regretted.

The soldier replied: "Yes, my mustache."

"Oh, don't worry about that," said

ADEN MERCHANTS COMPLAIN.

Protest Lack of Shipping Facilities Between Arabia and America.

The Department of State has received a dispatch from the American consul at Aden, Arabia, stating that the merchants at that port were complaining bitterly of the lack of shipping facilities between Aden and America, many merchants having had to discontinue business, as their warehouses were full and they had no means of shipping the contents thereof to the United States.

The dispatch further stated that the Italian vessels were giving the preference to shipments to Italy, and, as there is plenty of cargo for Italy, there was no space for cargo to be transhipped to the United States, and that the Italian lines had increased their freight rates 100 per cent and their passenger rates 125 per cent over prices prevalent prior to the war.

CONFERS MANY BENEFITS UPON WIDOWS OF THE WAR

Organization Known as the Society of Mutual Assistance Operating in France.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

PARIS, August 12.—Five thousand widows of the war have now benefited in one way or another through the "Society of Mutual Assistance of the Widows of the War." This was one of the earliest movements started for relief of war victims. It was organized August 19, 1914, and a week later began effective work under the name of the "Woman's Office" at 15 Rue de la Ville L'Evêque.

The "Woman's Office" sought employment, and endeavored by various means to assist women, whose income was cut off by the war, in earning their living. It gave no charity, but made loans to those in immediate want.

From a simple Women's Office, the movement soon became a Widows Office, and was finally reorganized into a Mutual Association. Its object is still not charity, but mutual aid in finding ways of gaining a livelihood for its members. It is interested in the general welfare of all widows of all political parties.

Directed by Frederic Masson, the venerable academician and historian of the Napoleonic era, is directing the organization, while the Countess of Ribes, who for years had assisted the orphans of La Villette by annual sales of knick-knacks, made in the antique style, organized the workrooms of the society. Nearly everything is made in the antique style and so well made as to rival real antiques. Some of the jewelry boxes and glove boxes with miniature or ornamental paper are masterpieces of French art. The widows are making all kinds of ornamental receptacles, in all forms, and handbags in black moire with carved clasps, pearls, bags with antique clasps, screens, lacquered Japanese chests, fans, hand-painted Christmas cards, etc.

As fast as the sales grow the membership will be increased, and by organizing annual sales in the principal cities of the United States, Canada and South America. It is hoped to create a permanent outlet for these articles that will support a considerable number of afflicted women. The benefits of this association are rigorously restricted to widows; remarriage cancels membership.
