

SEEN IN THE SHOPS

With brides and bridal trousseaus playing a leading part this month, it is not unusual to find the shops making a special effort to please the feminine shoppers. Trousseau sets of fine hand-made, lace-trimmed and beribboned under things come in various combinations, and in dainty pastel shades, if one does not care for all white.

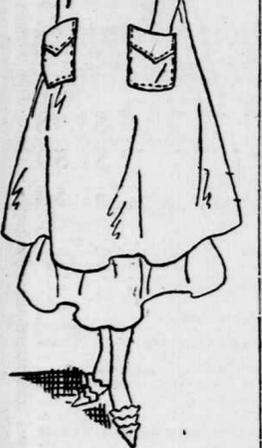

The most important feature of these sets is the petticoat, which has increased amazingly in width, bouffancy and popularity. The newest petticoats are trimmed with ruffles of small rosebuds, with a ruffle or hoop of some kind to hold out or support the skirt of the frock worn over it. One of the smartest petticoats seen is made of white taffeta, the rather stiff kind. There are rows of tiny tucks at intervals and puffs in between, with a ruffle hoop through a puff at the hips to give the desired distention. With it is worn a camisole of the sheerest knife-plaited chiffon, trimmed around the top with a deep ruffle of fine lace, tacked on daintily with rosebuds.

A pretty slip is illustrated, made en-

The new nightgowns are very elaborate affairs, of fine organdy, lawn or crepe de chine and satin. The one in

There are deep bosomplais over the shoulders, through which at a high waist line is run the ribbon, tied in front with a large bow. Another ornate creation is a nightgown of orchid-colored satin. Little fly-away bits of lovely lace precede to sleeves, with a little silver rose to weigh them down if they be-

Bedroom rules are pretty in dainty pale shades of satin, the front tucked with tiny little tucks, and with ribbons to cross over the instep and tie around the ankle.

WHITE NET FOR SMART BLOUSES.

It has three-quarter sleeves and is lavishly trimmed with cartridge pleats of colored ribbon. To be worn outside of the skirt.

BY ANNE RITTENHOUSE.

Special Correspondence of The Star. NEW YORK, June 15.—Several months ago Cheruit sent over the shirt waist with a peplum. The smartest medal that she invented has been worn by women here. It is made of strips of white organdy, placed between bands of white, picot-edged, taffeta ribbon, with pear-shaped sleeves and a belt of the ribbon tied at the side.

White net has come in and out of fashion for blouses and frocks, but it is decidedly here this season. The shops are full of it and women who do their sewing at home are turning to this fabric as a relief from muslin.

Arranging Garden Flowers.

The garden flowers are so beautiful that it is almost impossible to arrange them in any but a charming fashion. Still, we sometimes either don't take the time or don't know how to arrange them to the best advantage.

The young Japanese girl sometimes spends three hours arranging a single bouquet. We, of course, with our occidental necessity to hurry, would usually have much better results in arranging flowers if we would take time to do the work carefully.

We cannot, most of us, especially if we are full grown, take lessons in floral arrangement. Such lessons are taught at some of the boarding schools and colleges. But older persons must do the best we can to teach ourselves.

To begin with, we should study the habits and colors of the flowers. And we should try to arrange them in somewhat the same way that they grow in nature. Bulb flowers, therefore, are best placed in the lovely and convenient little flower holders—ducks, turtles or whatnots—that are made for the purpose, in a flat bowl. Iris, all the spring bulb flowers and gladioli are lovely in this arrangement, with all the stem line of flowers and foliage showing.

Long-stemmed flowers, of course, should be placed in tall vases, so that all the length of the stem is used. If the stems and foliage are pretty, a transparent glass vase in best. If the stems are ugly or devoid of leaves, an opaque vase is best.

Use, usually, the foliage of the flower in the arrangement, so that all the length of the stem is used. If the stems and foliage are pretty, a transparent glass vase in best. If the stems are ugly or devoid of leaves, an opaque vase is best.

Remember to change the water on cut flowers daily, if you would make any attempt to keep them fresh.

Put a little salt in the water, too, especially in that in which roses are kept.

FASHIONS AND FADS.

Skirts are generally ruffled. Sport hats of felt are most favored. Flexible bracelets are very much worn.

Drop earrings are increasing in favor. Short elbow sleeves are much befriended.

Even baby dresses nowadays are smoked. Dolly boxes are being made of crotona.

Large pearl knobs are still seen on handbags. Some of the newest frocks have short sleeves.

Your parasol may be any shape and be fashionable. Thick silk fringe is being used on English sport coats.

Long stoles of ermine and velvet are worn this season. The simply trimmed hats are decidedly the most chic.

Long, full sleeves have deep gauntlet cuffs of linen. Tailored suits of white pique are among the new things.

New bathing suits are made of gay figured materials. Buffed alligator is coming into use again for handbags.

Frocks of plain taffeta, combined with plaid are fashionable.
