

START FOR CAMP ORDRWAY
THIRTEEN MORE RECRUITS
WILL FILL 3D REGIMENT

Enthusiasm Prevails at Prospect of Terminating Long Wait at Camp Ordway.

Although none of the officers at Camp Ordway could say the exact day on which the troops would leave for Bismarck, Ariz., under the new orders issued by the War Department, the general opinion prevailed last night that they would entrain Friday. It will take practically all of the intervening time to arrange for transportation and to make other necessary preparations for the movement.

In anticipation of an early departure, sergeants attached to the 3d Infantry headquarters began the work of packing up last night. Supply sergeants in all of the companies were given instructions to pack their supplies, and a number of them started the work last night. However, some of them had gone out of camp under the general leave order, which was effective yesterday.

Officers and men alike were enthusiastic over the receipt of the news that they would move as soon as equipped, although the 3d Regiment expected to have the necessary number of men within a few more days.

Equipment Problem Easy. Until he received the orders and read their specifications he would say what procedure he would follow to get the District troops on their way. If it was merely a question of equipment, he said, the 3d Regiment could be reported ready.
