WASHINGTON, D. C., SUNDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 10, 1916.

AUSTRIAN NOBLE IN PERILS FUTURE

Count Michael Karolyi Leads in Movement for Democ- ratized Government.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.
BUDAPEST, Hungary, August 20.— Count Michael Karolyi, a nobleman of one of the most conservative of the old families, who has thrown down the gauntlet not only to the all-powerful government leader, Count Tisza, but even to the opposition leaders, and who, at the possible cost of his political future, has set out to "democratize" Hungary, tells the Associated Press that he is drawing his lessons from America.

He was in the United States raising funds for a campaign in behalf of a more extended ballot in Hungary when the war began, but he reached Budapest finally, after being interned in France, and he has kept the pot boiling ever since.

Among other things, in explaining his rupture with his old political intimates and his plan for democracy, he said:
"I came to appreciate the great value of democracy when I was in the United States. There I saw the way in which Hungarians who are separated from their fatherland and who here merely vegetated without any of the real rights of citizenship, the able citizens, and I saw to what position of impotence they had brought themselves. A democratic reorganization of Hungary, the basis of which is the general right to vote, is a burning necessity for Hungary. Unfortunately I discovered in one wing of the party none of the inspiration and none of the determined desire necessary for the creation of the general ballot. Therefore there arose between me and a part of the party vital differences in this connection."

His Uncle's Successor.

Karolyi came into political life as the heir of his uncle, Count Alexander Karolyi, for years leader of the ultra-conservative "high agrarians." He was elected to his uncle's former place as president of this group—and then split hopelessly with the members over his high protective duties that had shut out the Balkan states. He resigned, disassociated himself with the agrarians, joined the independents with the platform of justice, the right of democracy, and, acutely sharpened, and now has left the independents to form a still more radical party.

Long before the war he claims to have foreseen its possibility, and as a preventive measure against it urged that Hungary secure its independence by the capital she had for years been unable to get in Germany, and by making the loan there a loan of democracy, in a position of not venturing to go to war with a country indebted to them.
When the war did come he attacked Count Tisza and his party savagely, and the opposition scarcely less vigorously, but Hungary secured its independence matured to Serbia without any conditions, in other words, that they had not accepted a bargain to support Austria in Hungary should it come to war in return for reforms that at the time, too, were being advanced by the opposition eagerly, that they had not said: "We'll fight for you, but only on condition that you give us a democratic Hungary."

Obstructs Coalition.

Indirectly at least Karolyi has been the obstacle in the path of a coalition cabinet proposed by Tisza earlier in the war. Karolyi announced his agreement to such a cabinet only on condition that Tisza would get out, which naturally Tisza would not do. Karolyi declared he felt there could come no change in the course of affairs unless Tisza was removed from office, and a coalition cabinet with him at the head would be no better than no cabinet.

He has refused to have anything to do with the coalition effected between the opposition and the government, whereby the leaders of the former are to be consulted by the latter, kept informed of all government decisions, and permitted to offer advice as to the solution of big and important problems.
Karolyi walked out of the banquet party of which he had been the guest, and declared that the coalition meant nothing added for the opposition leaders, yet partial responsibility for the war, which he disapproves.

NEW FALL DRESS GOODS

From the Great Arlington Mills Trade Sale

At Great Savings From Present Market Costs

We attended the trade sale of the famous Arlington Mills Dress Goods, held in New York last week, and secured many choice lots of merchandise, which we offer in a sale tomorrow that Washington women are bound to enthuse over. The fabrics represented are the highest standard of quality, and represent the reigning favorites for fall and winter season. Another desirable feature—the majority are 50 to 54 inches wide.

We bought these lots of dress goods at considerably less than present manufacturing cost—and when you consider the sky-high prices for all woollens, you will realize the extraordinary value-importance of this event.

All the fabrics are guaranteed absolutely fast color, being manufactured of the old standard foreign dyes.
