

GRIFTHS MAKE MACK, BUT DROP SECOND

Good Hitting in Final Round of Opener Produces Four Runs and 8 to 6 Victory.

THREE PITCHERS BLOW UP IN FAREWELL ENCOUNTER

Athletics Overcome Three-Run Lead Obtained in Closing Inning and Win, 10 to 9.

Special Dispatch to The Star. PHILADELPHIA, September 30.—The local American League season was brought to a shivering close at Shibe Park today, with the Athletics and Nationals going fifty-fifty on a double-entertainment bill, the Nationals blazing the way in the opener by an 8-to-6 count, while the curtain act went to the House of Mack, 10 to 9, after some old-time slugging in the latter innings.

Neither game contributed in any way to the uplift of the national pastime, both teams showing a commendable spirit in their efforts to outdo one another in the matter of defensive sins. Ninth-inning rallies, the kind produced in fiction more often than in reality, however, lent a touch of the spectacular to both games, and gave the frozen fans something to enthuse about, even though one of the assaults produced a defeat for the hard struggling Nationals.

Griffith started Thomas against the Macks in the opening game, and he went along smoothly enough, but was yanked from the box score when Jamieson batted for him in the fourth.

This sent Goodwin to the peak, but he lasted only until the sixth, when he was chased to cover. Then he took up the firing duties until the ninth, when he gave way to Garrity, who started the inning by fanning. Ayers finished the game without being scored on.

Mack's Pitchers Pounded. Seibold and Parnham, both of whom turned in a pair of pitched games, got the pitching assignments for the Athletics, and of the two Seibold showed the better performance. Through a queer kink of fortune, or misfortune, rather, the stocky West Virginian drew the losing end of the afternoon's performance, while the combined slugging only teammates.

The rule was certainly a fortunate young man. He was permitted to remain in the game after the Nationals had clubbed him for five runs, accruing from as many hits, in the first two innings, only because an Athletic victory appeared beyond redemption. He became somewhat more effective as the game wore on, however, and really earned his great reputation, suffering from a slight case of fatigue. But the seventh produced a different story. Doc, taking things in his usual leisurely manner, grooved one for John Henry's triple to deep center. He carried at three only to deep center, but the seventh produced a different story. Doc, taking things in his usual leisurely manner, grooved one for John Henry's triple to deep center. He carried at three only to deep center, but the seventh produced a different story.

Under ordinary circumstances this trio of counters would be ample sufficiency as far as the Athletics were concerned, but today was far from an ordinary occasion in that the home team, Doc Ayers, one of Clark Griffith's regular best bats, went along for six innings in great shape, and scored hits being two and five, respectively, for the time.

But the seventh produced a different story. Doc, taking things in his usual leisurely manner, grooved one for John Henry's triple to deep center. Thomas and Shaw Fall. Ayers saw the handwriting on the wall in the home team's half when Shanks kicked Witt's grounder all over the infield. Doc didn't care much for that strike of playing and showed it by walking Grover. Doc then directed his walk himself when Griffith batted his footsteps toward the bench. This brought on young Thomas, who worked a few innings in the open. The latter was hardly an improvement over the departed Ayers, and after allowing him to pitch the first inning, Grover gave way to Shaw, who was even worse. Jim pitched to exactly three men, two of them being passed, forcing Grover to bat. The Nationals could hardly be said to have been less before him. They tallied thrice on the Wheeling aspirant in the fourth on reason of Elmer Smith's lengthy triple, easy to judge in Henry's path, and Grover's limitation of the croquet arch on Jamieson's grounder, the latter batting for Thomas.

Nothing further transpired on behalf of the Nationals until the tenth, when Leonard singled with one gone, stole second and scored on Menosky's drive to right. Foster who had walked, going to third. The Mack board of strategists, four to three, then took the fading Seibold in favor of Nabors, who introduced himself with a wild heave on which Foster scored. This followed successive hits by Smith, Rice and Shanks, the net result being four runs on two hits and one error. The Nationals held their lead up until the sixth when Thrasher's double, Seibold's infield hit, his steal on Seibold and Melms' Texas leaguer, which followed Schang's walk, chased in a pair of runs, while a third filtered across on Seibold's error. The Athletics followed with Healey's easy roller. One more resulted in the following inning on Grover's single, but Thrasher's second double, but after this Doc Ayers, who had succeeded Thomas and Goodwin in the mound, saw that no unnecessary liberties were taken with his delivery. Possibilities of Pennant Races in the Two Leagues

CHICAGO, September 30.—Brooklyn will begin its final series for the National League pennant Monday—against New York—in first place by half a game ahead of Philadelphia. The champions took the lead as a result of their victory over Gallia, 2, by Ayers, 2. Wild pitches—Seibold, Nabors, Passed ball—Henry, Empires—Messrs. Monday and Tuesday. Time of game—1 hour and 18 minutes.

Brooklyn has four games yet to play, all with New York, and Philadelphia has six to play with Boston in four days. Because Philadelphia cannot complete its whole schedule of 154 games, it has a slight advantage over Brooklyn. For instance, if both teams should win all their remaining games their victories would be the same in number—59—but Brooklyn would have lost 59 and Philadelphia 58. Runs that would be the same in number—59—but Brooklyn would have lost 59 and Philadelphia 58.

INJURY TO BANCROFT HURTS PHILLIES' PENNANT CHANCES

Shortstop Out of Game With Bad Ankle. Red Sox Should Win World Title Easily.

BY J. ED GRILLO.

The Phillies were unable to retain the lead in the National League race which they snatched from the Dodgers by winning the morning game by a score of 7 to 2. Rixey pitched steadily and effectively in this game, and for a time Grover Cleveland Alexander held the Dodgers safe in the afternoon contest, but with the scored tie, each team having scored a run, Alexander weakened and was hit hard during the closing innings, the Robinson team scoring six runs. Of the three games played the Phillies won two, thus gaining a few points on Brooklyn, but the injury to Bancroft's ankle probably will prove a serious blow to Moran's team.

New York tackles the Dodgers tomorrow. The Giants, after winning twenty-six straight games, shutting out the Braves in the first game yesterday, fell victim to George Tyler's slants and dropped the second game, when Sallee was hit hard. Brooklyn is not likely to make any headway in the games with the McGraw team, but it remains to be seen what the Phillies can accomplish against the Braves.

Had the Griffen been able to correct both ends of their double-header yesterday they would have advanced into the first division. As it is they are but a slight margin behind the Yankees and Yast, and if they are able to win from the Yankees they may finish ahead of them, for the Tigers are pretty sure to make clean sweep of the series with St. Louis.

The Red Sox virtually clinched the pennant by their victory yesterday over the Yankees, making it three out of four. Monday they will start a three-game series with the Athletics, and with Joe Bush out of commission the Sox will have no trouble winning the one game they need to clinch the flag.

The record of the Giants of winning twenty-six straight games probably will go down as the greatest feat in the history of the game. Nothing like it has ever been accomplished, and the handikap will be a heavy one for Moran's team, and is certain to make the outcome of the National League pennant race even more uncertain than has been expected.

Benion Blanks Boston in First Game of Double-Header, But Sallee Is Hammered.

NEW YORK, September 30.—After Rube Benton had shut out Boston in the first game of a double-header, 4 to 0, for New York's twenty-sixth straight victory, the great winning streak of the home team was broken in the second game, which Boston won, 5 to 3. Though the locals broke the old major league record of twenty straight early in the week, they just missed tying the world's best when they were defeated by the Bostonians.

A pair of home runs stopped New York in the seventh inning of the second game. Sallee had been pitching splendid ball, and with the score 2 to 2, Konechy opened the inning with a scratch single. J. Smith then hit a home run into the left field bleachers, and the crowd roared. Later, after a moment's rest, Sallee pitched a wild pitch which gave Boston two more runs. Anderson then went in and retired Maranville at first, after Boston had made seven successive hits.

George Tyler, who stopped the Giants after the first game, pitched a strong game and did not permit a earned run. In pitching New York to a 2-0 lead, he showed a momentary weakness when he pitched a wild pitch which gave Boston one run. The three men to get on first two were retired on double plays. The scores:

CHARLEY DEAL HELPS CUBS

Doubles With Bases Filled, Cardinals Losing, 8 to 4.

CHICAGO, September 30.—Charles Deal made his debut in Chicago today as a member of the local National League club, and with a timely double when the bases were filled enabled Chicago to defeat St. Louis, 8 to 4. The visitors had taken an early lead by driving Packard off the mound, and Hendrix came to the rescue and held Huggins' men safe.

In the fifth Chicago hit Meadows' hard, they bunched five hits, two of which were doubles, one by Mann and the other by Deal, which cleared the bases. This attack coupled with an error by Hornsby, a wild pitch and a base on balls, was enough to win. Score:

BROOKLYN REGAINS LEAD FROM PHILS

Rube Marquard Holds Moran Host to Three Hits and One Run.

ALEXANDER IS POUNDED BY ROBINSON'S FORCES

Complete Reversal of Form Shown by Both Teams From Morning Game, Which Quakers Won.

Special Dispatch to The Star. NEW YORK, September 30.—Rube Marquard was crowned monarch of the pitching mound at Ebbetts Field this afternoon. This mighty southpaw, never mightier in his life, hurled the Robins back into first place after they had been forced to evacuate by Eppa Jetha Rixey in the morning game.

Marquard swept the Phillies before him with ruthless hand and sent the idolized Grover Alexander crashing down in the wreck. Alexander, the right bower of Moran, was sent limping out of action by a broadside of hits in seven innings, and all the time the left-handed Rube drove on. The scores were 7 to 2 and 6 to 1, respectively.

Brooklyn, thanks to the wonderful work of the big left-hander, holds forth in first place again by a margin of slightly more than one point. The standing of the teams, extended to the last decimal point, now is:

Brooklyn, 60-66-7 Philadelphia, 60-54-2 When the Quaker city team went into the lead by winning the morning game the standing was:

Philadelphia, 60-58-9 Brooklyn, 60-40-7 Morning Game Easy for Phillies. When the story of the disastrous rout in the morning game had been told, when the Homeric deeds of Fred Luden had been credited and when Alexander's home run off Alexander had been cheered to the last faint echo, the fame of Marquard was sung in the highest, and never was hero more deservedly honored.

He was found for one run in the first frame and two hits produced that tally. The Phillies spent their full power in that one feeble flutter, and after the crowd had roared and when Marquard blazed at them, and then back to back first base. In the eighth inning, the crowd roared and when Marquard blazed at them, and then back to back first base. In the eighth inning, the crowd roared and when Marquard blazed at them, and then back to back first base.

The Phillies spent their full power in that one feeble flutter, and after the crowd had roared and when Marquard blazed at them, and then back to back first base. In the eighth inning, the crowd roared and when Marquard blazed at them, and then back to back first base.

When the story of the disastrous rout in the morning game had been told, when the Homeric deeds of Fred Luden had been credited and when Alexander's home run off Alexander had been cheered to the last faint echo, the fame of Marquard was sung in the highest, and never was hero more deservedly honored.

He was found for one run in the first frame and two hits produced that tally.
