FAIRIES WORK WONDERS, BUT SO MAY CHILDREN

Turning Old Papers Into Playground Equipment as Wonderful as Anything in Fairyland.

Hark ye, school children of the city of Washington! Cinderella's fairy godmother, or rather some one akin to her, is coming back to prove that fairies and wonders may exist in places other than between the covers of books.

Think ye, it is not so? Then listen! There is a fairy, or probably 'twere better to term this being an elf, who is close at hand, ready to make glad the hearts of the boys and girls who are willing to do a little work in return.

Name of the Fairy is "Op."

The name of the fairy, or the elf, is "Op." Certainly not a euphonious name for one of the little folk, but, you see, it is made up from the initial letters of these two words, "old papers."

Now, "Op" is ready, even as Cinderella's fairy godmother, to touch a magic wand to the old papers which she has to turn into a playground.

School officials are in communication with "Op." They know that all he has to do is to touch a bundle of old papers with his magic wand, and lo! there, will be just the playground equipment the respective school needs most.

Suggested by The Star.

The plan of collecting old papers and selling them for money with which playground equipment might be bought was suggested to the heads of the school system by The Star. The school officials expressed gratification with the plan and adopted it.

Possibly this scheme never seemed to the children of Washington to be connected with fairyland, but surely it is as wonderful as any of the tales of Cinderella's fairy godmother to make a coach from a pumpkin, and coachmen from mice, is it not?

Therefore, ye children of the city of Washington, work hard and let no old paper go to waste. It is a good little fairy ready to perform his "wonders" in return.

REV. A. J. DONLON GREET THE G. U. LAW STUDENTS

Makes Address at School Opening, Referring to Problems Confronting the United States.

Preparedness was the keynote of the address of welcome by Rev. Alphonus J. Donlon, S. J., president of the Georgetown University, delivered last night at the opening of the Georgetown University Law School. Father Donlon told the students that great problems are in store for the United States, and that the lawyers, from the very nature of their profession, were to be in the forefront in the solving of them.

Father Donlon said he had great confidence in the future of the United States, that leaders were the only thing needed. "The rank and file can always be depended upon to give valorous support," he said. "They have always done so and will continue to do so. The leaders are the thing necessary. But to be a leader needs preparation, and that preparation is the study of the law."

The faculty and the students will meet tonight at an informal reception, after which the studies for the year will be mapped out.
