Army Notes.

The wives of army officers at West Point are actively interesting themselves in the preservation of the charming old home of the Misses Warner as one of the interesting literary home-stays of well known writers, as it was in this home that Miss Warner wrote "The Wide, Wide World," a book which, next to "Uncle Tom's Cabin," has perhaps enjoyed a wider popularity than almost any other American book of fiction.

Miss Warner was well known to most of the older generation of army officers who from time to time were stationed at West Point, and only the winter before her death came to Washington as an honored guest of Gen. John M. Wilson's family. By Gen. and the late Mrs. Wilson Miss Warner was taken to an afternoon tea given in honor of Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, who, upon learning that the author of "The Wide, Wide World" was actually present among the guests, insisted upon having her recalled, just as she was leaving the house, and warmly embracing her, told her that from first coming to this country as a child she had spent more charmed hours reading "The Wide, Wide World" than any other book she knew of.

That the approaching season should be a notable one from its unusually large percentage of available men is amply proved by the fact that from last week's society alone no less than eighteen first lieutenants in the army were ordered here on various details for the winter.

Mrs. Washington Matthews, widow of Dr. Matthews, U. S. A., has returned to her home at Washington after spending the summer at Jamestown, R. I. Capt. John G. Winter, U. S. A., is at present with the 5th Cavalry in Texas.

Brig. Gen. George Andrews, U. S. A., retired, and Mrs. Andrews, who spent last season at 1817 Columbia road, have leased an apartment for the winter at the Cordova. Capt. H. C. Pillsbury, U. S. A., at present on duty at Deming, N. M., has been posted at that place by Mrs. Pillsbury, who spent the past few months with her parents, Gen. and Mrs. Wood, at the Soldiers' Home in this city.

Col. Guy Carleton, U. S. A., accompanied by Mrs. Carleton and Miss Carleton, sailed October 5 for the Philippines. Lieut. Mason J. Young, U. S. A., and Mrs. Young have an apartment at the Farragut for the season. Maj. Benjamin D. Foulis, U. S. A., is in Washington for the winter, having been detailed to duty in charge of the aviation branch of the Signal Corps.

Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant, widow of Gen. Grant, U. S. A., is making a short stay at Washington before going for the winter, as usual, to her sister, Mrs. Potter Palmer, in Florida. Mrs. Grant will spend some time in New York. Brig. Gen. Calvin C. Staiffen, U. S. A., and Mrs. Staiffen have returned from Nahant, where they spent the season, and are at the Ontario for the winter.

Capt. Stuart Heintzelman, U. S. A., professor of military science and tactics at Princeton University, New Jersey, Heintzelman and their family will join him for the winter. Mrs. Conley, wife of Maj. Conley, U. S. A., will leave shortly to join Maj. Conley, in Texas, after a stay of several weeks at Washington, where she came with their children from Plattsburg barracks, N. Y.

Mrs. Phil Sheridan, widow of Gen. Sheridan, U. S. A., accompanied by Misses Sheridan, went last week to Albany, N. Y., where they were present at the dedication of the monument in Capitol Park to Gen. Sheridan. Mrs. Howard Perry and Miss Perry, wife and daughter of Maj. Perry, U. S. A., have left the Presidio, where they spent the time of Capt. Wood's absence on the border, and have joined him at his new post, Jefferson barracks, Va.
