COTTON SOARS 89 POINTS IN SENSATIONAL MARKET

By the Associated Press. NEW ORLEANS, October 18.—The most sensational advance of cotton occurred around the opening of the market today as the result of the rumor that the tropical hurricane had struck into the cotton region near Mobile.

The upward movement was checked by heavy offerings from profit takers, sending prices 40 to 60 points down from the top, but still 20 to 32 points over yesterday's final quotations.

Highest for Season at New York. The advance was encouraged by bullish spot advices from the south and by reports that the New York market. Later prices eased a few points from the best.
