VOTE IN PRIMARIES BASIS OF FORECAST

Political Statistician Shows Preponderance of Republican Sentiment in Country.

GROUPS DOUBTFUL STATES

"And the veritable riot of claims and counter claims, straw votes and forecasts," said a local political statistician with a non-partisan viewpoint today, "it seems to me that we have overlooked one of the most impressive summaries that it would be possible to make. In the primaries that have been held in the doubtful states 3,350,000 votes have been cast in ten states having an aggregate of 188 votes in the electoral college. This is nearly one-fourth of the entire popular vote given to the three leading candidates in 1912, and more than half of the total votes cast by those ten states for those candidates in that year.

Catches All Classes. "For the primary catches all classes, all shades of political affiliation, all the farmer and the urbanite, the employe and the professional man, the fellow who talks a lot and thinks a little and the one who thinks little and talks a lot—all of them are represented in the voting."

Individual States Considered. "Going from the general summary to the individual states, I find some equally striking and pertinent figures. In Washington, to begin with, the republicans polled 214,000 votes in their primary. Now, the total vote cast for Wilson, Taft and Roosevelt in Washington was approximately 281,000. Therefore, if the democrats get every vote that was not cast in the republican primary, they will have 66,000 more than the republicans to carry that block of states."

Results in Michigan. In Michigan the republicans were able to count 244,000 votes in their recent primaries. The total vote of the three leading candidates in the 1912 election was 320,000. On that basis the republicans can win in Michigan without getting a single vote more than they got in their primaries.

Primary Vote in New Jersey. In New Jersey the republicans polled 187,000 in their recent primary. That is only 19,000 votes short of a majority of the total vote of the three leading candidates in 1912. The democrats polled less than 42 per cent of the vote in Wisconsin in 1912 and less than 37 per cent of it in 1914.

Reports from mining centers indicate that the greatest possibility of a coal shortage affects heavy coal and not domestic coal. Coal mine operators contend that they have not been able to keep their normal output going. Miners have left work for better pay in other fields; the car shortage situation has made it impossible for rapid shipments, and scores of factories turning out war munitions are running double shifts, with a consequent increase in the amount of steam coal used. Added to this tight situation has been a famine in coal abroad, and many a manufacturer in this country has had to pay the export price.

Plenty of Coal at Capitol. No matter what the coal shortage, real or alleged, may amount to, the members of Congress are going to be kept warm, according to information received from the office of Elliott Woods, superintendent of the Capitol. The United States Capitol is heated by a system of radiators connected with a coal-burning plant at the Capitol and the buildings served by the Capitol heating plant, and Supt. Woods expects that today, it was disclosed that the government faces the spiking prices of structural materials in perfecting the navy building program. Although the department had allowed $3,000,000 more for each battleship than it did last year, and placed a limit of $11,500,000 on the cost of machinery, although the bidding ran with a close margin.

GEN. BELL SENDS REPORT OF VICTORY BY VILLA

Quotes Mexican Official as Saying Carranzistas Lost More Than 1,000 Men.

A report from Brig. Gen. Bell on the recent fight at Palomas, Mexico, forwarded by Maj. Gen. Funston, was received at the War Department today. It is as follows: "A prominent official from Chihuahua City says that one of the commanding officers of the Osuna army told him the following story of the battle of Palomas: 'Gen. Osuna had about 3,000 men, and they had taken out eleven trains loaded with provisions, ammunition and troops, besides cavalry. Carranzistas lost more than 1,000 men to intercept and gave battle for a few minutes, retreating and fighting as they retreated. Then Villa sent another detachment in behind Osuna's force, cut the railway and telegraph and also attacked Osuna's rear. Osuna followed the retreating Villistas into a canyon in the foothills and there Villa attacked. 'Salazar had stationed about every about twenty men, and as Villa attacked their front, Salazar attacked their flank, which caused a stampede, many of them throwing away their arms as they ran like scared sheep. 'The Villistas killed and captured more than 1,000 and also captured all their trains and provisions. 'The Carranzistas fled to Fresno, where they tried again to make a stand, but Villa drove them into Chihuahua and made his headquarters only five miles outside. 'When the train left Chihuahua yesterday morning at 9 o'clock other passengers say that Villa was camped just outside the city and that his campfires were visible Sunday night and that the people are panic stricken. 'The Carranzistas fled to Fresno, where they tried again to make a stand, but Villa drove them into Chihuahua and made his headquarters only five miles outside.
