UNCLE SAM'S ADVICE ON WHEAT SAVING

Gives Second Lecture to American Housewives on Food Conservation.

Answers to Questions

Uncle Sam today offered to American housewives a "lecture" on food conservation.

The first of a series of lessons in kitchen economy will be given at the purpose of the program outlined on the home cards which Washington women received when they registered at schools as members of the food administration.

These lessons are being prepared by Dr. Abby M. Marston, chief of the advisory committee on home economics, office of food conservation.

Today's "lecture" follows: In asking American homemakers to conserve wheat wherever possible and suggest that they use cornmeal as a substitute, the food administration has excellent reasons.

Why should I use cornmeal at least once a day so that other people may use the wheat flour which I give up?

Why not let the other use the cornmeal and let me use the wheat flour which I prefer?

Why should I be so particular about the color of my cornmeal and blue larkspur in tall standards lined the aisles of the church, forming an exquisite perspective of color that lost itself in the green of palms and Australian ferns which banked the chancel arch, giving the finishing touch to one of the most beautiful bridal settings.

Chicago

President and Mrs. Wilson Attend Wedding Today of Miss Harding and Mr. Prince.

Miss Nash Giving Picnic Supper for Miss Blair and Commander Station Tonight.

A midsummer flower garden in all the beauty of full bloom was St. John's in Lafayette Square for the marriage at noon today of Miss Elizabeth Harding, daughter of Mr. William P. G. Harding of the federal reserve board, and Mr. Frederick Henry Prince, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Henry Prince of Boston.

Seldom at this season has so notable an assemblage come together in a Washington church as that which witnessed the nuptials of today's bride and bridegroom. Official, diplomatic, military and resident circles were all well represented and a number of the interesting foreigners connected with the various war missions also were among the guests who filled the edifice.

The President, who paid the bride the unusual compliment of being present was accompanied by Mrs. Wilson. They reached the church a few moments before the ceremony, escorted by the President's military aid, and were taken to seats near the chancel.

A profusion of pink gladioli, blue hydrangeas, pink and white peonies and blue larkspur in tall standards lined the aisles of the church, forming an exquisite perspective of color that lost itself in the green of palms and Australian ferns which banked the chancel arch, giving the finishing touch to one of the most beautiful bridal settings.

The bride, who entered with her father, was preceded by her only attendant, Miss Elsie Hasbrouck of Kingston, N. Y., six ushers leading the bridal procession to the altar.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was lovely in her bridal gown of filmy tulle. The long skirt, which barely escaped the ground, was of several layers of the tulle, the top one, which was outlined with pearls.

BUREAU CHIEF COMMENDS BILL TO SAVE THE CALVES

Says Slaughter for Veal Little Less Than Outrageous During Conservation Campaign.

The destruction of possible food supply through the slaughter of calves for veal is little less than outrageous, Ethelbert Stearns, chief statistician of the bureau of labor statistics, writes in a letter to Senator George, commending the latter for his bill introduced to save the calves.

The 42,000,000 calves slaughtered in the last six years means the loss of 160,000,000 pounds of meat which have resulted from the keeping of these calves until they were matured, according to the statistician.

"As to the amount of waste food involved in this slaughtering of calves, Mr. Stearns says, 'The average weight of the net weight of a dressed calf is ninety pounds on the average, while the dressed beef weight from a two- and-a-half-year-old steer is 900 pounds.'"

"The legislation that you propose would save to the nation about $300,000,000 pounds of beef a year, which, under the British dietary regulations furnishing one pound of beef a day, would mean 5,600,000,000 days' meat ration. It should be noted also that a pound of matured beef contains 1,040 calories of food energy, while a pound of veal contains but 550 calories."

"The 'baby beef' experiment which was begun a few years ago proved itself, Mr. Stearns declared, 'a thorough failure in many parts of the middle west, particularly in Illinois, men undertook to feed the calves on a diet of corn and molasses. Its food was selected to produce beef quickly. It was kept growing and kept fat from the start, and it was found that in from ten to twelve months calves could be transformed into what are called 'baby hogs' at an expense of less than that of cattle raising on western ranches, and that at from ten to twenty months old a calf would weigh from 900 to 900 pounds and dress 500 pounds of meat.'"

Secretary Lane entertained at luncheon at the Shoreham yesterday in honor of Mr. Hoover, chairman of the food commission.
