Mrs. JAMES CARROLL FRAZER

Mrs. MITCHELL CARROLL.

POSTPONEMENT of the reception to have been held last evening at Memorial Continental Hall for the large body of Italian soldiers and musicians who arrived in New York at the week's end was a keen disappointment to patriots and music lovers, who had hoped to hear the first strains in Washington of the Royal Band of Grenadier Guards of Sardinia, an organization now three centuries old, and to personally greet the soldiers, each with a brilliant record on the field of battle. The ambassador of Italy and members of the cabinet will be their hosts during their visit here, and the President and Mrs. Wilson have promised to go to New York for the great concert and spectacular show to be given at the Metropolitan Opera House the evening of October 12 for the benefit of the Italian war relief fund, when all the greatest artists of the world, including the Royal Grenadier Band, will take part, and the first rendering in this country of Verdi's "Hymn of the Nations" will be heard.

SMALL dinner parties entertained the evenings all during the week, the minister of China and Mrs. Koo, the Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. McAdoo and others entertaining small but distinguished companies, most of the parties centering about some foreign guest of honor. It is to visitors of other lands that society will pay most of its homage all during the coming season, and even the debutantes, few in number, will be relegated to second place.

THE assembling of official and diplomatic families for the season is now almost complete, and there are far fewer changes in residence than there were last season. Almost every house of consequence in the capital has its quota of war workers, and senators and representatives, presidents of banks and the once "idle rich" have all opened their homes wherever necessary to carry on war work.

WOMEN of the Senate, like those of the cabinet and other branches of the government, are devoting hours each day to sewing, knitting, bandage making and other supply work for hospitals, and, in fact, to any and every thing to help carry on. If one chose to make the acquaintance of the Vice President's wife, Mrs. Thomas R. Marshall, or some vitally active woman of the Senate, they could not do better than to, on any day of the week, visit the Red Cross workrooms in the Senate office building. Those who are not purporting to be slacker or who are not engaged elsewhere are there every day from Monday until the week ends.

AS the great drive for the fourth liberty loan goes on one finds Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo at the women's headquarters, on F street—where, too, may be seen many of the most wonderful posters gotten out for the fourth issue—early and late, urging on the loan from the women's standpoint, and with her her corps of efficient woman workers, such as Mrs. Harriet Blaine Beale, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, Mrs. Thomas H. Carter, Mrs. Edward Beale McLean, Mrs. Atlee Pomerene, Mrs. Wesley M. Stoner, Mrs. G. H. Dorr and others.

MRS. MONTGOMERY BLAIR of the District Chapter of the Red Cross has sent out a pitiful plea to women within the ten miles square who form the various units to lend all their best waking hours to surgical dressing work, and one may read through the lines the horrible suffering a woman slacker imposes on the soldiers of war by making this work secondary to domestic duties or small social diversions.

THE President's wife is wide awake to all the calls for carrying on, but she yet took time last week to save the relative of a former President and one of the greatest war generals the world has ever known from ejection from her rooms in a fashionable apartment house just off 16th street. The apartments, this ninety-year-old woman was told, were to be turned into hotel accommodations, and she must look for rooms elsewhere. Her daughter, a government clerk, found it impossible to find quarters of any kind for her mother, and there were visions of the White House women who had once shown in the drawing rooms of the White House suffering ignominious ejection, when Mrs. Wilson heard of the case and took the matter in hand. It was Miss Benham, Mrs. Wilson's secretary, who assured the family that they were not only to retain their small apartment, but also to pay the same rent as before profiteering went into fashion. Now an autograph photograph of President Wilson occupies a prominent place with the pictures of other great Presidents on the walls of the grateful old lady.

The ambassador of Brazil, Mr. da Silva, is retiring from his post in this country to become minister of foreign affairs at home, with Miss Gama, a guest of honor at the dinner party entertained at the Montgomery Country Club last evening by Mrs. Breckinridge Long. The other guests of Mr. and Mrs. Long were: The ambassador of Spain and Señora de Riana, the ambassador of Argentina, Dr. Naon, the Secretary of State and Mrs. Lansing, the Secretary of War, Warren, Senator Phelan, the charge d'affaires for Uruguay and Mme. de Fens, Mrs. John W. Lewis, Mrs. Benton McMillin, wife of the American minister to Peru, Mr. John Barrett, Mrs. McMillin, Mrs. Christian Haugre, Mrs. Gist Blair, Mrs. Julius Lay, Mr. Joseph of the Brazilian embassy, Mr. John M. Stabler of the State Department and Mr. Basil Miles.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson will head the list of patronesses for the concert, which will be given by La Societe des Concerts du Conservatoire of Paris, on Wednesday, October 9, at 8 o'clock, in Jolly's Theater. The orchestra, under the direction of M. Andre Messager, will give its first concert outside of France, on Tuesday evening, in the Metropolitan Opera House in New York. The French high commission requested the visit of the symphony orchestra and with the co-operation of the United States government they made the trip a French battleship. The other patronesses for the Washington concert will include: Mrs. Marshall, Mrs. Sing, Mrs. McAdoo, Mrs. Baker, Mme. Lessorand, Mrs. Willard Saulsbury, Mrs. Margaret Woodrow Wilson, Mme. de Blampre, Mrs. Perry Belmont, Mrs. Stephen B. Elkins, Mrs. Gibson Fabuscock, Mrs. Eugene Hale, Mrs. John Hays Hammond, Mme. Christian Haugre, Mrs. Henry Rea, and the members of the French high commission.

Mrs. Thomas H. Marshall, who returned to the New York a few days ago with the Vice President, after spending a short time in New York, is spending the week at her home at the Senate office building. Handicapped by many war workers, Mrs. Marshall is still absent at her home, and others who take no interest in that particular branch of war work, and earnest women who spend some hours a day there have answered the call of the health department September 25 for white masks to be worn in connection with the epidemic of influenza, have made and delivered more than a thousand masks and carried on some of their other work.

Mrs. Montgomery Blair addressed the senators wives on Friday on the great importance of surgical dressings, and Mrs. Marshall says she feels sure the women of that unit will be able to take up work in that line in a few days. Mrs. Blair says the necessity for dressings is so great as right now, and many calls come for the supplies from the numerous hospitals right here at home, that those who have been brought back from the great conflict.

Assisting Mrs. Marshall daily at the capital are Mrs. Gore, Mrs. A. Jones, Mrs. Wesley L. Jones, Mrs. Knox, Mrs. Mcumber, Mrs. Nelson, Mrs. Sargent, Mrs. Toland, Mrs. Pomerene, Mrs. Reed, Mrs. Warren and Mrs. Watson.
