

Girl joins ranks of airplane thrillers and performs death-defying stunts for amusement of spectators thousands of feet below. She is Miss Lillian Boyer, and the photograph at left shows her hanging by one hand to a wing of her plane. At right, she is walking around the top of her rapidly moving plane, several thousand feet in the air.

©Cline, from Wide World.

Two children of Senator and Mrs. Frelinghuysen, Joseph S., jr., and Emily Brewster, enjoying a romp with Paddy during Washington's first real snowstorm of the season.

National Photo.

Two well known "liberals" at the recent Liberator's ball in New York—Clare Sheridan, sculptress, who gained prominence by her work in Russia since the establishment of the Lenin government, and Max Eastman, editor, author and critic.

©Underwood & Underwood.

Miss Eleanora, a seventeen-year-old English girl, who will soon attempt Blondin's feat of walking across Niagara Falls on a rope. Plans have been made for the event in early spring.

Wide World Photo.

Snapped in Rock Creek Park. Misses Laura and Inger Bryn, daughters of the minister from Norway, having a real snow battle.

National Photo.

When the crippled transport Crook arrived in New York she unloaded a number of passengers who did not go to France and Germany with the American fighters. They were the German and French wives of United States soldier boys who were married abroad. Mothers and babies are getting their first sight of their new home.

International.

Home again after years in France and Germany. Photo snapped on deck of the United States Army transport Crook when she landed in New York, showing some of the 900 American fighters. The lads are shaking hands with Capt. Frank Rappa, U. S. N., and congratulating him on bringing the leaky Crook safely into port after meeting with heavy seas.

©Underwood & Underwood.