

New Materials and Embroidery

BY ANNE RITTEHOUR.

There is a new fabric called white grain of powder, according to our translation. It is soft in its color with somewhat of the roughness and texture of the old material.

By reason of white holding the attention of dressmakers this summer, this fabric has been quickly accepted for suits and topsuits.

True, there is a large mass of women who do not realize that the topcoat is still in existence because of the overwhelming popularity of capes; but there are other segments of the fashion which are not always so fortunate. The capes which are the fashion to wrap a cape around the body and hold it with the hands or arms, which are not always so even though it kept the hands harnessed; they were not free for business, and the American instead upon holding purse and packages with her fingers, not drapery.

The loose fit cape which succeeded the tightly wrapped one left the hands free, but it blew in many directions and was not always so convenient as represented. It is still the wrap of the hour, however, for those who wish to run with the crowd.

Its popularity has not ousted the topcoat for any occasions. Curiously enough, the capes are a garment for service more frequently than the long coat. The latter is kept for occasions when the capes are decorated with embroidery and beading and made of fine white fabric and this season puts forth for all manner of garments.

The sketch shows a coat of this white grain of powder fabric and half sleeves of dark blue crepe de chine. In autumn, we will wear coats with fur bands in the same manner. The reason the shoulders are a little designs of the crepe embroidery in silver and steel beads. The coat is made of fine fabric and has enough dark blue at the neck and cuffs to belong to the overgarment.

It is the belief of some who stand in the line of fashion that ornamental topcoats will take the place of capes entirely in the early autumn. The French dressmakers are showing evidence of this. There is a feeling that the latter garment has lasted long enough. It does not mean, however, that the capes will disappear. The French dressmakers with her varying climate and her necessity for protection in winter months, the capes are a garment of prestige last year, but the cloth did, and the early season may see the capes in the place of the topcoat as something they need, something that will serve when a cape will not.

Is Iodine a Remedy for Goiter?

Two thousand years ago the Greek physicians prescribed sponge charcoal with some success in the treatment of goiter. In other words, an iodine treatment has been used empirically long before the relation of iodine in food with the function of the thyroid gland was known.

Regions where goiter is endemic are usually free from exophthalmic type of goiter, in which iodine deficiency is the cause. In fact, in many parts of Switzerland and in certain of the great lake regions in America, the exophthalmic type of goiter is rare. It contains iodine in a readily assimilated form, the iodine of commerce is obtained from seaweed.

Sea fish is good for people who have simple goiter. It is perhaps harmful to people who have exophthalmic goiter. It is neither good nor bad for people who have cystic goiter.

Iodine deficiency is defective in certain young women in goiter regions we do not know. Nor, in fact, is the iodine deficiency which is obtained from sea food is wholly due to its content of iodine. It may possess a general tonic effect, but it does not, simply improves digestion by diminishing the intestinal putrefaction which is caused by the action of the simple goiter. Through intestinal putrefaction, the iodine deficiency is a fair share of the cases of simple goiter.

Iodine deficiency is in the open air, precisely as for pulmonary tuberculosis, is still the most effective treatment for the disease. In fact, the iodine deficiency is a readily assimilated form, the iodine of commerce is obtained from seaweed.

Salsify, Parsnips and Spinach.

Are you familiar with the following ways of serving salsify, parsnips and spinach? If not, I suggest that you try the following dinner menus:

Liver, with Gravy
Baked Parsnips
Salsify en Casserole
Tomato Salad
Coffee, with Whip

Salsify en Casserole (Salsify is commonly known as the "vegetable oyster" owing to its flavor, which closely approximates that of the oyster. It is related to the lettuce family, although the only edible portion is the long taproot, which is becoming more of a favorite each year in the home garden). Wash and trim off the ends so as not to have too long, and put into cold water to boil for fifteen minutes. Drain, and place the vegetable in a pot of boiling, salted water to boil for one hour, until tender. Drain once more and put into a frying pan in which four slices of bacon, cut into small pieces, are frying over a hot fire. Blend together three tablespoons of butter and one tablespoon of flour, let simmer in a small saucepan, on the range, and add to this saucepan two cups of boiling water, bring to a boil, and add, and bring to a brisk boil. Then pour the boiling liquid into the frying pan, and the salsify will be ready for four minutes, stirring constantly, this season with one teaspoon of salt and a dash of pepper and strain the liquor over the cooked parsnips in the baking dish. Cover all with bread crumbs, and bake in a moderate oven for one hour.

Cold, Sliced Onion Beef?

Beef, with Gravy
Baked Parsnips
Spinach Salad
Coffee, with Tarts

Baked Parsnips. Wash and peel six large parsnips and cut them into halves lengthwise. Cover them with salted water and let simmer for one hour, or until very tender. Drain and place in a greased casserole, on the range, blend four tablespoons of butter and four tablespoons of flour, add a cup and a half of boiling water, and let simmer for four minutes, stirring constantly, this season with one teaspoon of salt and a dash of pepper and strain the liquor over the cooked parsnips in the baking dish. Cover all with bread crumbs, and bake in a moderate oven for one hour.

SCARF EVENING

A scarf evening gown is delightful for late summer affairs. Fashion the gown after the modish, long line effect. Have a long, straight piece of fancy chiffon or organdy pinned all around. Join the center of one long side to the center front of the frock. Cover the joining with a large or draped in any way that suits the occasion. The scarf can then be draped in any way that suits the occasion. The scarf can then be draped in any way that suits the occasion.

Strawberry Fritters. Crush and put through a colander some fresh strawberries to make one cup of pulp. Add three beaten eggs, one teaspoonful of sugar and one cupful of flour, mixed with one teaspoonful of baking powder and enough more of flour to make a thick batter. Fry in a deep kettle of smoking hot fat and serve with plenty of massed berries.

To Pickle Cauliflower. Take some very white and close cauliflower in bunches, spread them on an earthen dish, cover with salt and water. Cook two tablespoons of salt in one quart of water; then put them in jars, pour boiling salt and water over them and let stand overnight. Drain through a fine sieve and put in glass jars. Fill up the jars with vinegar. Cover tight and use in a few weeks.

The Little Wood Mouse Sees a Handsome Stranger.

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

Good looks, star, oftentimes deceive. Who trusts them, who is apt to grieve. Who trusts them, who is apt to grieve. Who trusts them, who is apt to grieve.

The venturesome little Wood Mouse who had run away from home to the Great World, and who Buster Bear had so recently caught, thought himself very smart in getting away from Buster Bear. Really he wasn't smart at all. The truth is Buster had found ants, of which he is very fond, and at once gave up chasing that little Mouse.

The further he got from the scene of his flight, the more he began to feel that he was in a very awkward position. He was alone, and he was hungry, and he was tired, and he was afraid. He was in a very awkward position.

He was so interested in the stars that he forgot to eat. He was so interested in the stars that he forgot to eat. He was so interested in the stars that he forgot to eat.

Checks, Please!

AGSY Lindsay, Chair terrier, sat in the midst of the lower level of the Grand Central station and lifted his shaggy little head heavenward and howled. Dicky Lindsay, not quite as fat, three, sat down upon an ancient case belonging to his father and howled because Raggy was howling.

Ricky Lindsay, of exactly the same age, sat upon the motor of a smart suit case and buried her face in her mother's skirts and howled because her brother was howling.

And Merriam Lindsay, who didn't look old enough to be anybody's mother, and who looked highly ornamental in spite of the fact that her smart hat was tilted to the wrong angle, and her bronze curls too much towed, and her small feet very much tangled up in a new, stiff dog leash, looked exactly like Raggy and Dicky. She wished that she, too, could sit louder than Raggy and Dicky.

She kept her brown eyes focused on the information booth. That much she had learned from Raggy and Dicky, which was a very long time ago, and which was a very long time ago, and which was a very long time ago.

LISTEN, WORLD!

BY ELSIE ROBINSON.

Jack and Jean have come to hate each other with a grinding strain that's shortly going to strip the matrimonial gears unless a miracle happens. And how can it be so, when they are so much in love? It is the most unexpected way. They are all ready for the expected reasons for hating and yet schooled in how to meet them. But this thing crept upon them unawares—and their bitterness is all the more deadly.

They are both married and have a child. They are both married and have a child. They are both married and have a child.

History of Your Name

BY PHILIP FRANCIS NOWLAN.

TYLER.

VARIATION—Tighman. ORIGINAL ORIGIN—Anglo-Saxon. SOURCE—An occupation.

Tyler is another of those old Anglo-Saxon surnames which antedates the system of French nomenclature which the Normans laid over England in the twelfth century following the conquest.

At first glance you would be apt to consider Tyler as a very simple name. And that is not so. Its spelling only is misleading. The pronunciation is anything but simple. It is a name of the twelfth century following the conquest.

Scalloped Eggplant.

Prepare an eggplant and cut it in two-thirds-inch cubes. Cook in a small side of boiling water until soft. Drain and place in a greased casserole. Cover the top with a layer of butter, mixed with one teaspoonful of baking powder and enough more of flour to make a thick batter. Fry in a deep kettle of smoking hot fat and serve with plenty of massed berries.

Paris started the vogue, and Americans accept it with more than their usual enthusiasm for a new dictate of Paris. For, as a nation, we have always liked to be a fashion leader.

Asparagus, Cheese, Butter Sauce.

Remove the loose leaves from one bunch of asparagus, scrape the stems, and cut the ends so as to have them all the same length. Wash them in a bowl of cold water, wash them carefully, and quickly, and tie them in small bunches, making care that the stems are all of equal size. Put the asparagus tips into boiling salted water and simmer for ten minutes.

Special Deviled Crabs.

Break one pound of crab meat into pieces with a fork, add half a cup of melted butter, a little salt and red pepper, the yolks of two hard-cooked eggs rubbed through a sieve, and a tablespoonful of meat sauce, two tablespoonsful of tomato catsup, two tablespoonsful of salad dressing, the juice of a small lemon, two raw egg yolks and the whites of two eggs beaten stiffly. Put the crab meat in a bowl with the mixture and sprinkle the mixture with breadcrumbs. Bake in a moderate oven for twenty minutes. Serve with slices of lemon.

Your Home and You

An Attractive Pull for the Electric Light.

Have you ever seen a person attempt to light the electric bulb under the large silk shade of a table or bridge lamp, groping fumblingly around for the switch and finally have to bend down and peer under the shade to locate it? Do the lamps in your home work like this? Then here's a pretty convenience that will apply to every electric fixture in the house, from cellar to guestroom.

The black rubber thumb key on the socket has already been used in most cases to toggle the brass chain switch, but even this disappears beneath the deep shade which adds to the appearance of the lamp. If, however, you will fasten to the end of this chain a colorful cord, of a contrasting color, both colors harmonizing with the shade, you will find you have not only the comfort of a quickly lighted lamp, but a decorative addition to the lamp itself.

The Housewife's Idea Box

If you have some black lace which you would like to use but which you find looks dull, restore it as follows: Sponge it with green tea. Wind it around a bottle of dry. Keep the lace away from the fire, as heat will ruin it. When entirely dry, remove the lace and it is ready to be used.
