

WHAT DAD SAYS ABOUT IT

Dad Says:

—That there's only one thing he likes better than a bowl of mush and milk—and that's two of 'em. But the beef trust feels that one federal judge is enough—when he's the one they like. Which shows that the beef trust is no hog.

—That when the gas Co. hires a lawyer to hand out legal hot air to a learned judge, the company can keep on handing out gas to the people at 80 cents.

—That when he rides down to work in the morning or out home at night on the Van Buren line, he thinks that what the people need is more street cars and less 55 per cent.

—That if the people had the right to recall judges he could get nearly everybody in Chicago outside of the Record-Herald office and the Kohlsaats eat-shops, to sign a petition giving Judge Kohlsaat the hook.

—That there may not be much in a name, but it's funny just the same that Judge Kohlsaat's first name is Christian.

—That he could think more about the Chinese, Italian and Turkish scraps if he didn't have to think overtime about the high cost of living.

—That it may be harder for a rich man to break into heaven than for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle—but that it's just as hard as all that for a rich man to break into jail.

—That Willie Hearst is long on page editorials about reciprocity and China, but darned short on editorials about $6 a week to the salesgirls in Chicago department stores that use page ads in Willie's papers.

—That Hearst is awfully kind to people away off in China, but can't hear the men and women workers right here in Chicago.

Claims Babies Are Needlessly Sacrificed Every Year.

Prof. Charles R. Henderson of the University of Chicago, declared before the American Association of the Study of Prevention of Infant Mortality, that thousands of babies are needlessly sacrificed every year because there is no system whereby supervision can be exercised over their care by society.

"They die of many causes that could be remedied, such as hunger, cold and neglect," he said. "We cannot save the babies, because we don't know how or where to go to save them. Birth registration should be made compulsory."

Attempts are being made to raise $10,000,000 throughout the country for a child health campaign.
