

IMPORTED VELVET GOWN MADE FOR WINTER BRIDE

This gown of velvet and antique embroidery was made for a bride of this season. The black velvet continues from back of neck to end of train.

Jet fringe edges the embroidery, and a black rose decorates the bodice. The price of this gown was $375, but its main features can be duplicated in cheaper material at a moderate price.

'NOTHER JOB FOR UNCLE

Bernard N. Baker, a pretty good-sized business man of Baltimore, started out jauntily enough to raise $15,000,000 for an independent steamship line from coast to coast via Panama Canal.

He failed. The money trust in Wall Street wouldn't allow it—says it intends to run its own steamships "in sympathy with the railroads."

Say, Uncle Sam, you've got another job ahead. You must run YOUR steamships in sympathy with the people.

Otherwise, you've thrown away your money at Panama.

First Actor—"Hello, old man, how's the hypnotizing game?"

Hypnotist—"I've dropped it entirely."

First Actor—"Why, how's that?" You were very clever at it."

Hypnotist—"Yes, that's just it, too clever. The other day I hypnotized a rabbit to believe he was a bull-dog and he bit me in the face."
