

Indianapolis.—"Madero says he is for the people. He is a liar. He and his family are among the biggest landlords in Mexico. He has betrayed the people of his native land"—Francisco de Lara of Los Angeles before Socialist National Convention.

De Lara went on to remark that the revolution was going to win, that Pasquale Orozco is not the leader, but just an "instrument," that the U. S. would like to intervene to save the Mexican kings of money, and a few other peaceful things of that sort.

De Lara may be right in most of his conclusions, but he's away off in figuring on Pasquale Orozco. If the revolution wins the gentlemen who have been using Pasquale as an "instrument" are liable to get the surprise of their lives. "He won't 'instrument'."

Shamokin, Pa.—Coal miners started gathering here today to await reports of Wilkesbarre district convention. American members of United Mine Workers helping police to keep peace among foreign miners.

Perry, Ia.—Ralph McMillen, 19, aviator, with Harry Williams as passenger, lost control of machine. Plunged 100 feet into Frog creek. McMillan may recover. Both legs and arms broken. Williams unhurt.

San Antonio, Tex.—Brigadier General Joseph W. Duncan, commander of Department of Texas, died at Fort Sam Houston of heart failure today.

Minneapolis.—Retirement of 2 bishops and creation of 6 new Episcopal residences recommended to Methodist General Conference by Committee on Episcopacy. Negro delegation has given up all hope of getting bishop of their own race.

East Liverpool, O.—Taft and Roosevelt almost met at Steubenville this morning—almost. Roosevelt's special pulled into Pennsylvania railroad yards there just as Taft was waking up in his private car in same yards.

Lenox, Mass.—Miss Lillian Goeppler's pet dog fell in river. She jumped in to "rescue it." Dog swam ashore. Lillian drowned.

Berlin.—Glazunoff, Russian composer, is at work on symphony he hopes will depict Titanic disaster in music.

Yes, indeed, Johnny, there have been composers who were cheerful persons. But they're all dead now.

Stamford, Conn.—200-pound black bear is roaming around this vicinity and some of the people are thinking of changing their hen roosts into summer houses.

We'd like to give these Stamford ginks a tip. The last time a "200-pound black bear" got monkeying around our hen house we used a shotgun and very fine pellets, and the "black bear" got down on its knees and promised never to do it again. The only part of that bear that wasn't black was its eyes.

Berlin.—Court of Appeals has ruled that police chief's order that all women in opera boxes take off their hats is the German for "un-constitutional."
