

drink into his system. The next thing he remembered was when he wakened up in an alley, minus his collar and a few odds and ends of jewelry.

Kate went and had one (1) drink with a nasty, horrid stool pigeon. It took her all of Tuesday to get that one (1) drink into her system. And then she went to sleep at Lake and Sangamon streets without going through the formality of picking out an alley.

The conspiracy against Alderman Richert was hatched by his political foes; that against Kate was hatched by the city.

Chicago is a sad and gloomy place, chuck full of horrid conspiracies and exceedingly powerful drinks.

But Alderman Richert and Kate ought to console each other. They both have been badly used.

Kate's conspiracy so affected Judge Gemmill that he discharged her, and she won't have to be forelady again until the next time she is trapped into taking one (1) drink by a stool pigeon.

To remove lime from the inside of your kettle it is best to boil vinegar in it. The acid acts upon the deposit of alkaline matter inside and will cause it to disintegrate and crack off.

JUDGE-WHOLE AUDIENCE

New York, Aug. 28.—A federal judge will be the whole audience at two plays to be given at the Republic theater by David Belasco within the next few days.

Abraham Goldknopf has sued Belasco for $100,000, charging that Belasco's successful play, "The Woman," credited to Belasco and William C. DeMille, is really a plagiarized version of "Tainted Philanthropy," submitted to Belasco by Goldknopf a year ago, and rejected by Belasco.

When the case was called, Belasco offered to produce both plays before Judge Holt, and let the judge decide if there were any connection between them.

Judge Holt agreed, making only one condition—that he should be the only one to witness the production of the plays.
