

pion's mother, put up $12,000 worth of real estate.

Baldwin was paid $750 for putting up the real estate for Johnson, and has now a signed contract with Johnson by which Johnson will allow himself to be under guard night and day until he is delivered to the court.

Johnson appeared in Federal Judge Carpenter's court this morning. He sat with his mother and sisters and white secretary, Joe Levy.

W. G. Anderson, Johnson's attorney, appeared and offered Baldwin's bond. Assistant U. S. District Attorney Parkin said the bond was satisfactory.

U. S. District Attorney Wilkerson said he would ask no further bond on the later indictments returned. Johnson was freed.

"Gee, it's good to be out again," he said. "Couldn't stand it being cooped up with all those criminals, and the brand of conversation my cellmate handed out to me was the limit."

As Johnson left the courtroom he stopped and turned to the reporters.

"I'm going to take a 25-mile spin in my auto right away," he said. "It sure is good to be out again—"

And just then City Detectives Tearney and McClune clasped their hands on his shoulders and told him he was under arrest for assaulting the Tribune photographer whom he struck with his cane.

Johnson was taken to the Chicago avenue station. There he was asked for $400 cash bail. He hadn't the money. He wrote a check and Joe Levy cashed it.

While Johnson was being freed, more evidence against him was being presented before the federal grand jury.

Charles Lindquist, room clerk of the Hotel Charles, Milwaukee, was the principal witness.

Lindquist swore that Johnson lived at the Hotel Charles with Belle Schreiber as man and wife.

Lindquist said that shortly after this, Johnson again appeared in Milwaukee, this time with Ettore Duryea-Johnson, who committed suicide, as his wife.

Lindquist said he could not be mistaken, because he recognized Belle Schreiber as a former stenographer at the Hotel Plankington, Milwaukee, when she came in with Johnson.

It also became certain today that the white woman Johnson took to Reno with him, when he went to fight Jeffries, was Belle Schreiber. He introduced her everywhere as his wife.

It was shortly after the Reno fight that Johnson switched wives, and began showing off Etta Duryea-Johnson.

There is considerable mystery about this switching, and it may be that Johnson will also have to face a charge of bigamy.

It has not yet been revealed who is to be the guard that Baldwin is going to have watch over Johnson "day and night."
