SHE SUPPOSED RIGHTLY

She was a little girl, and she would ask questions.

"Mamma," she began, "what does Transatlantic mean?"

"Across the ocean," replied her long-suffering mother curtly.

A long silence, broken only by the irritating sound of a book's leaves being turned rapidly backward and forward. Then:

"Mamma, does 'trans' always mean across?"

"Yes, it does; always," answered the little girl's mother, and added sternly: "But if you ask me another question I shall send you straight to bed. So, remember!"

The second silence was complete and lasted quite three seconds. It was broken at last by a plaintive, small voice which commented ruminatively:

"Then I suppose transparent means a cross parent?"

A peculiar fact about the banana is that no insect will attack it, and another is that it is immune from the diseases that fruits are subject to,

"Look, this place charges 15 cents for poached eggs and only 10 cents for eggs when they're scrambled."

"Well, I guess they figure it's worth a nickel to unscramble them."
