BEULAH HOME HEAD CHARGED WITH CRUELTY AND GRAFT

Oliver Richards, superintendent of the Beulah home, 2144 North Clark street, was charged with cruelty and graft before the Curran legislative committee by Dr. Macy B. Weinberg, a woman dentist, today.

Dr. Weinberg backed up her charges by the testimony of a 16-year-old girl, who was a patient in the Beulah home last year, and who told of the ill-treatment she had received there.

"The day before my baby was born," said the 16-year-old girl, "I was forced to scrub six flights of stairs. After that I had to wait on the 52 girls who were in the 'home' at the time.

"I fainted in the afternoon. I went to my room. I took with me from the pantry an egg. Mr. Richards sent a messenger to me telling me to return the egg because I had no permission to eat anything except what was on the table. I had had nothing to eat all day.

"None of the girls ever dared to complain to the directors when they visited the 'home.' We knew that Mr. Richards would put us out on the street the next day."

"I think that Richards is mentally unbalanced," said Dr. Weinberg. "He has two hobbies, illegitimacy and the Bible. He talks of the first and quotes the second to the girls constantly. He recites passages of the Bible to them that I would not even repeat.

"He tells the girls that they put on tight skirts to attract men and that they deserve all they get. He tells them they should lie down on the floor and lick up the crumbs like dogs.

"Besides that, Richards shows a peculiar interest in the identities of the men responsible for the condition of the girls. Some of the girls believe he uses this knowledge for his personal interest."

"What do you know of Richards' financial condition?" asked Rep. O'Connell.

"I know that he now lives in luxury in a beautiful home," she replied, grimly. "Whereas, before he took charge of the Beulah Home, he lived in apparent poverty."

Otoman Zar Adush Hanish was expected to appear before the commission to explain what the sun cult wants with little boys in its religious ceremonies this afternoon.

If Hanish, the "little father" of the sun cult, does not appear, the commission will raid his "temple" at 3016 Lake Park avenue.

A newly married woman who expected friends to dinner went to the kitchen to see how her one servant was getting on with the preparations, and, finding her a little behindhand, asked if she could anything to assist. "Well, ma'am," said the maid, "you might wash the lettuce and make the salad, if you like." "Yes," the mistress assented. "And where shall I find some soap, Jané?"

WEATHER FORECAST

Fair tonight with probably frost for Chicago and vicinity; Tuesday fair with slowly rising temperature; moderate north to northeast winds.
