

"MODERN ADAM" NEAR DEATH IN BOG, NAKED ALL NIGHT IN BITTER COLD

He Shivered With Cold and Sank Deep In the Ooze.

Spencer, Me., Sept. 11.—Joseph Knowles, the "Modern Adam," who is living a primitive life in the Maine woods to prove that a civilized man is as capable as a savage, is not finding the forest a genuine Garden of Eden.

Knowles passed a night floundering, nearly naked, through a dangerous swamp, emerging next morning so chilled and exhausted that it took days to recover his strength.

The artist was driven into this adventure by chagrin at being seen by another man and fear that he would yield under the stress of loneliness to seek human companionship.

When he approached a spring for
