

were banners declaring their faith that "Surely God will set us free"—and the protection which civilization gives to womanhood. Neither that faith nor the womanhood carved that wound which will leave its scar as long as she lives.

Where does Colorado get men on whom it drapes the uniform of power to kick, slug and stab women and children?

Some come from barrel houses in Denver; some from the Baldwin Felts "detective" gunmen who were imported to kill before the soldiers came and who changed to the payrolls of the state; and some from railroad trains, poor, homeless creatures who have been seized as "hoboes" and given the chance of joining the "army" or of going to jail.

Out at Forbes the auto of a federal investigator was held up by one of these guards. That soldier of the state had been in the state but 22 days. He had "beat his way," he said, from Pittsburgh.

At Ludlow a tenth of the men were impressed into the state service in the same way that this tramp was caught and forced into service.

Many of the enlisted men of the original companies are deserting or quitting if they have pull enough to get a discharge. Their places are filled with hoboes, gunmen and those who can be counted upon to carry out the orders of Chase, the czar of Colorado, who rides into a crowd of women on his horse and shouts "Charge!"
