

er, at Dent. Mrs. Oettinger is an invalid, and though she recently had a position in a department store offered her, she has been unable to accept it because of ill health.

Mother Lends Aid.

Her mother, who has a small income, is supporting herself, her daughter and grandchild.

Oettinger, according to testimony taken when Mrs. Oettinger was granted a divorce, receives $120 a month from the government. He has failed to pay alimony for the support of the child any part of the time since the order was issued by Judge Warner, according to Mrs. Oettinger.

Mrs. Oettinger and her mother made an appeal to Secretary Daniels several months ago, but were told, Mrs. Oettinger says, that Oettinger would be "notified of his duty."

May Appeal to Wilson.

Mrs. Mayers declares if she cannot get relief for her daughter through Daniels she would endeavor to raise money and go to Washington to make a personal appeal to President Wilson.

The Leading Man.

HE IS SOME DETECTIVE

Everett, Wash.—Officer 33 of the Everett police department, otherwise "Tony," a brindle terrier, has added to his reputation by capturing a murderer in the act.

"Nip" was his name and choice chickens fresh killed his favorite food.

Tony has a wide reputation for taking two-legged chicken thieves, so he and a motor cop were put on the job and ended Nip's career. This police dog has been with the Everett force for six years and he's about the wisest thing in Washington on four feet. He knows enough to take a car when he wants to more than four or five blocks. Several times he has attacked prisoners who were trying to fight their way free from an arresting officer.
