SNUGGLIN' TIME

BY H. M. COCHRAN

When the sun's comin' up, and the day's comin' on,
And the light's streamin' in on their heads,
The kiddies awake; then the whole house will shake
As they scramble up out of their beds.
There's a patter of feet and a rush down the hall,
Then they hop in with Mother and Dad,
And they hug and they kiss and then cuddle in bliss
When snugglin' time comes they are glad.

When it's dusk outside, and the moon is up,
And there's stillness all over the town,
When it's two or three hours past the time when they sup,
And there isn't much real life aroun'.
The kiddies will run to their Mother and Dad;
They'll climb in their laps for some rhyme.
Those children are happy; those youngsters are glad,
They know when it's snugglin' time.

NO APRIL FOOL JOKE

"April Fool—quit your kiddin' " yawned M. J. Daly, when Officer Patrick Flynn, passing his home, W. Chicago avenue and Orleans street, early today aroused him by crying "Fire!" A burst of flame licked his nightie. The copper helped Daly and his wife down a ladder.
