Some of Maj. Funkhouser's more or less aids were out at the doings on the South Side yesterday. The major was not present with his censor board, or he would have ordered a "cut out" on Jack Graney's triple in the sixth and wonderful one-hand catch in the seventh, which caused a near crime wave among the bugs.

Several peanut butchers solicited patronage and were not arrested by the morals' inspectors.

George Chip won a slight shade over Knockout Brown in Akron, O. Both men were willing to mix, but failed to damage each other.

Jack Dillon got the verdict over Battling Levinsky at the end of twelve rounds in Butte, Mont. Dillon outboxed the New Yorker, who appeared affected by the high altitude. He was winded early in the fight.

Ad Wolgast and Joe Rivers have been matched to fight twenty rounds in Los Angeles May 19 or 22.

Earl Blackburn, sub Cincinnati catcher, may jump to the Feds. He was sold to Indianapolis, and asked for more money when told he would do regular duty. Blackburn was one of Tinker's finds and talked to his old boss when the latter was in Covington last Sunday.

Larry Chappell was at the game on crutches, but will be sent to his home to recuperate.

Chase, Blackburne and Daly Are Sox Stars—Cubs Soft for Reds.

One swallow doesn't slake a thirst, and neither does one ball game prove the caliber of a diamond crew, but Callahan's men yesterday in the initial battle against Cleveland plainly showed that the stuff is present of which winning teams are composed.

There is pepper, fight and the nerve to stick in the face of odds. There are no quitters in the line-up. The men seem willing to work together without regard for personal averages, which has not always been the case with South Side teams.

The infield and battery can be classed among the first rank. The outfield is only average, but it may make up in batting what it lacked in artistic execution.

One encouraging feature is the work of Hal Chase around first base. Many of the wise ones opined that Hal was through last year and had been for some time. The shift from the Yanks to the Sox resulted in re-awakening him to a certain extent, but he was not the same Chase who earned the title of Prince Hal.

Yesterday he did everything that could be expected, and a whole lot that the large majority of first basemen would never have gotten away with. The manner in which he went about his work was enough to cause thrills among Sox fans, who have been eagerly awaiting a star first baseman since Jiggs Donahue passed on.

Chase was there with his marvelous ground covering and had his snap throw perfect. His ankles are strong again and he moved around with assurance. He acted like a youngster breaking in, with all the finish of a veteran. The combination can't be beat.

Two of his plays, in the third and ninth, were of the regulation Chase type. In the third O'Neill opened with
