WE DO AS WE DREAM

Almost a generation ago one of our captains of commerce fixed as the goal of his ambition the ownership of the tallest building in the world.

He has attained it. The Woolworth building towers unto the sky like a pyramid of ancient Egypt—it, too, represents toll taken from thousands of lives.

A captain of industry had another dream. He wanted his factories humming with the cheerful labor of the most skillful and best paid workers in the world.

Henry Ford's dream is coming true. His shops are the Mecca of the ablest craftsmen. He has set a magnet which insures pick of the best.

We do as we dream.

What is your dream—conquest, vainglory or useful human service?

ANIMALS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

The musk-ox may be a musk sheep for all he knows about it, as the naturalists have never quite decided whether the short-legged, long-horned beast with the strong, musky odor belonged to the bovine family or to the family of ovine, or sheep. He's smaller than even a small ox, but, aside from the curved horns he resembles the ox more than the sheep. Although formerly common in northern Asia and Europe, the odorous sheep or ox is now seldom found outside of the Arctic America. It's fast diminishing in number and, like the buffalo, it will probably soon be extinct, except in domestic herds, in circuses or museums.

The kimono sleeve has got into babyland. Little folks are following this style, too.
