

So all the evidence against the boy is practically circumstantial. The whole case against him could be swept away in an instant if he would furnish a satisfactory answer to the police's question, "where were you between 7 and 11 o'clock on April 1, 1913?"

Yet, for 14 months, he has sat in a cell, his lips sealed, rather than answer that one question!

IS there some beloved woman whom Gifford SECRETLY visited that night and whom he will not expose—for whose fair name he will gallantly ride, with his youth, to the death-chair in that little gray room at Sing Sing?

Malcolm Gifford, the Accused Slayer and Missing Girl Witness.

BY WAY OF CONTRAST

One of the great railway systems, now using 100-pound rails, is about to exchange them for rails weighing 120 pounds to the yard. It has ordered freight locomotives so powerful that one will pull as much as 60 once pulled.

It knows that business in this great country is bound to grow. It has kept its credit in fine shape by prudent and efficient management and it doesn't intend to be caught napping. When the rush comes it will be ready.

In spite of its tremendous investments, this railway system is earning good returns. The reason is simple. It is doing primarily a railroad business, not a speculative business in stocks or bonds.

No, we don't mind telling what railroad it is. It is the Pennsylvania.

Sew a small brass ring on the garden gloves and hang them up when not in use.
