

taurants. Then she finally went to Pittsburgh where she had friends.

She secured a job in a restaurant at poor wages for long hours. It was in the restaurant she met a Chicagoan, Isador Tendler, well-dressed and attractive.

He made love to the girl. He could talk of the things she wanted to talk about. She became lonesome when he was not around. And finally he came to her and told her he must go away to Chicago. Before going he told of the wonders and possibilities of Chicago. The girl was impressed.

When he had gone the girl was very lonely. Finally she heard from him. The letter echoed the hope of a glorious future in Chicago if she came here.

The police are making the claim that he sent her a ticket. At any rate, she came. Here the story took its dark shade.

According to the evidence which the police presented to the agents of the department of justice, the girl was first placed in a house at 1114 W. 14th st. Then the man is charged with having turned her out on the streets to hustle.

After that it is claimed she was placed in a house at 1623 Washburn st. The owner of that place is said to have skipped when the police got on the trail of Tendler.

The girl is reported to have once told an acquaintance that she would escape from Tendler and the streets if she was not afraid. She was even willing to go back to the darkest parts of Russia to be free and good, she said.

After the police found out about the house on Washburn street, Tendler is charged with having placed her in a house at 1312 Newberry avenue, owned by Mrs. Rose Miller. It was here the police found the girl.

When they worked up what they considered sufficient evidence, they made a sensational raid on the place and got the girl, Mrs. Rose Miller, Harry and Bessie Mukowitz and Jack and Bessie Miller. The last two couples claim to be married, but the police do not believe their story and will charge them with adultery, they say.

This morning agents from the department of justice conferred with Capt. Coughlin and Sergeants Weisbaum and Yance, who made the raid. They are working up evidence with a view of presenting it to the federal grand jury.

The federal men are also working on a story that a Russian band of white slavers are operating in Chicago. It is said to be a more effective syndicate than the old Italian gang which broke up with the murder of the girl in Bridgeport.

SOMETHING TO SOB OVER

She—It's so pathetic about the lives of flowers. They grow out here in myriads on the lone, wind-swept hills, lift their smiling little faces bravely to the sun, wither and die—and no one in the world gives them a thought.

He—Exactly. No one seems to give them a thought until they are about $4 a dozen at the florist's.
