COULDN'T MAKE MONEY AS A GIRL SO SHE BECAME MAN

Philadelphia, July 13.—"I couldn't make money enough to live on as a girl, so I cut my hair off and donned men's clothes, determined to have money enough to live comfortably."

Seated on her suitcase, which contained one hundred bottles of medicine and pills, a woman giving her name as Miss Grace Mabel Gray of New York today told reporters at a police sub-station here why she was masquerading as a man. She is held pending word from New York.

"My parents died when I was 12 years old," Miss Gray continued, "and I have no relatives and few friends. For years I have struggled along as a clerk in stores, barely eking out an existence.

"I grew tired of the struggle and dressed as a man, believing I could do better."
