

true to the sinful woman he married. Although too late, I am telling the truth at last. My husband's love for me is such that I believe he will even now forgive the folly and sin I am guilty of and for which, God knows, I am suffering.

Today, one of the rare occasions on which I am free from pain, I have written in full the confession of my guilt. By my long silence my poor young husband has been unjustly convicted, although absolutely and entirely innocent of the cruel charge brought against him.—Ruby Shawe Cameron.
